Lynching Bill Foes See Split Of Democrats If It Passes

Harrison Aids Southern Minority Filibustering Against Measure.

Warns of 'Grave' Results to Follow

Sen. Miller Says 'Revolt' Might Be Inspired by Such a Law.

The Senate's Southern minority yesterday sharpened its attack on the Wagner-Van Nuys anti-lynching bill with broad hints of party disruption if the measure becomes law and attacks on qualifications for office of Senators who support it.

Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, veteran Democratic wheel horse, and Senator John E. Miller, of Arkansas, Southern newcomer to the Senate, carried the brunt of the day's assault on the bill.

"Beware, gentlemen, beware!" shouted the resonant-voiced Harrison. "You are taking from the South something that they have been devoted to. Do not treat us that way. Reconsider this matter. Think about it.

"Its consequences may be most momentous. No living man can tell as to that. Is the faith of the South to be broken? Is its love for the Democratic Party to be shattered and its devotion to those who have made that party great to be dissipated?"

May Call Night Session.

Senator Miller touched on the same theme when he warned that "revolt" might follow any attempt by the Federal Government to interfere with local government because "the Southern people love the Constitution." Miller asked the Senate to "return this Government to a constitutional basis and stop further consideration of this bill."

It was the second week of open Southern filibuster to prevent a vote on the anti-lynching measure. Aware that the bill would pass by a large majority if ever forced to a showdown, less than a score of Southern Senators are determined to hold out against a vote, even if important measures on the regular program are delayed.

Majority Leader Barkley, who is taking no open part in the discussion, is holding in reserve a "night session" weapon to break the filibuster, and may invoke it this midweek. Asked yesterday if he considered the bill an "Administration measure," Barkley said the bill was being independently considered "on its merits"—that the President had never recommended it.

Would Oppose Advocate.

The saber-tongued Harrison, who missed being Senate majority leader by only one vote when Barkley was chosen last year, prodded advocates of the measure with shaft after shaft as he took the floor for the first time to denounce the bill as "an arrow pointed at the South."

He admonished "all aspiring gentlemen in this body who may retain some hope of becoming the nominee" for President to "stop, look and listen" before voting for the bill.

"It is always better to put advocacy of a question upon better and higher grounds than that," he said. "And those sweet, amiable gentlemen who answer to their names when the roll of the Senate is called every time a newspaper corresponuent calls them to go out with a fluttering of the heart because they

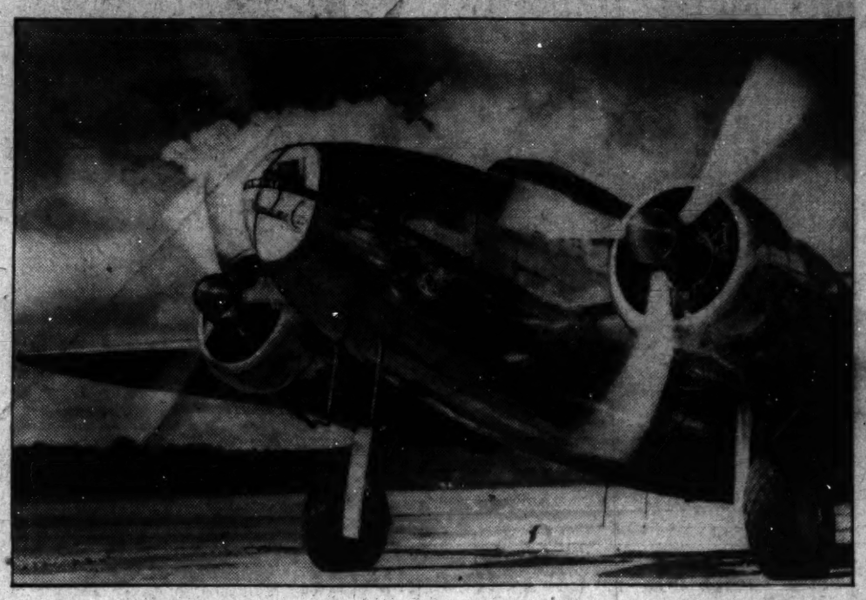
Airliner Falls, Burns, 10 Dead As Flames Beat Back Rescuers



A Northwest Airlines plane, exactly like the one above which visited Washington last October, fell in flames in the Bridger Mountains near Bozeman, Mont., late yesterday afternoon. There were 10 persons aboard, six passengers, two company employes and a pilot and copilot. The plane is a new high-speed type convertible into a bomber.

Plane Goes Into Spin in Windstorm Over Montana Mountains; Northwest Company's First Fatal Accident in 11 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Bozeman, Mont., Jan. 10.—A giant Northwest Airlines plane, with ten persons aboard, crashed in flames late today in the rugged Bridger Mountains, 14 miles northwest of here. All of the ten were killed.

C. A. Larson and Glenn White, ranchers, who were cutting timber in the gulley-gashed mountains 100 yards from where the airliner plunged to earth, reported the big ship suddenly went into a spin and burst into flames as it hit the ground.

They reported they were unable to rescue passengers because of the fire enveloping the wreckage.

Aboard the plane, bound from Seattle to Chicago, via Minneapolis, were:

Nick Mamer, pilot, and F. W. West, copilot, both of Spokane.

G. A. Anderson, Spokane.

I. E. Stevenson, Spokane.

D. McKay, the Hudson Bay Co., Winnipeg, Canada.

L. Levin, Butte, Mont.

By James D. Secrest.

A combination of business privilege tax with a low-rate income levy was proposed yesterday as a solution to the District's fiscal dilemma by Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, following the first session of the fiscal affairs sub-committee of the House District Committee.

Dirksen, ranking minority member of the sub-committee, said he believed the realty and personal property tax rate should revert to $1.50.

As Representative Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma, previously had indicated he favored renewing the business privilege tax despite its disappointing return, Dirksen's support practically assured that it will be recommended by the sub-committee.

"I am not at all wedded to the business privilege tax," Dirksen explained, "but I think it would be a bad precedent for us to discard it after only a year's trial.

Today the sub-committee will renew its inquiry with Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, as the chief witness. Maj. Donovan will explain why officials at this time are unable to predict whether the 1939 deficit will be $3,300,000 or $5,000,000.

Nichols, at the opening meeting, served blunt notice on the Commissioners that he would oppose any proposal to increase the Fed-

The foreign office said negotiations were expected to start in Washington about February 15.

A. E. Overton, joint second secretary to the British Board of Trade, is the other member of the delegation and N. O. Chalkley, commercial counselor in Washington is to be adviser.

DuPont Fears For Business in New Deal Reign

Senate Jobless Committee Hears Manufacturer Score Labor Policy.

By Sidney Olson.

Lammot duPont, president of E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company, told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday he believes "there is reason to fear for the future" from the Roosevelt Administration's business and labor policies.

The head of the great chemical products company, while noting his experts forecast 23 per cent less business this year than last, nevertheless stressed that the company will spend $35,000,000 in plant and equipment improvements.

While he declared taxes should be revised to aid business and that the New Deal's labor laws should be clarified, he refused to make any direct recommendation on either score, and asserted he was no expert in either field. Senator James E. Murray (Democrat), Montana, pursuing duPont in the matter, at last said:

"Despite the fact you know so little about these problems, you undertake to tell the people of the country that the Administration's policies are wrong?"

"Oh, I wouldn't say that, Senator," smiled duPont. At the recent meeting in New York of the National Association of Manufacturers he criticized New Deal legislation

Child Welfare Report Favors Private Effort

Public Workers Carry Too Heavy Load, Carstens Study Shows.

Extension of social service programs by private institutions ministering to child welfare in Washington and staff expansion in the Child Welfare Division of the District Public Welfare Board were recommended yesterday by Dr. C. C. Carstens, of New York, after exhaustive investigation into local care of dependent, neglected and delinquent children.

Emphasizing the fact that District welfare problems necessitate a load of approximately 100 cases per social worker, for a staff of the present size, Dr. Carstens, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America, said 50 cases are generally accepted as the maximum one worker can handle successfully.

Wider activity by private agencies would cut down the number of cases requiring attention by the child welfare division, he stated, while an increase in the division's personnel would qualify it to deal more effectively with the remainder of cases.

Among Dr. Carstens' most heavily underscored recommendations was

Passengers Bare 'Debauchery' Among Crew of Liner Hoover

By Edward T. Folliard

A first-hand account of the alleged debauchery among the crew of the Dollar liner, S. S. President Hoover, after the vessel went aground on a tiny island near Formosa was turned over to the Senate yesterday by the State Department.

The report, made up of the affidavits of five passengers, told how members of the crew got drunk on the ship's liquor, engaged in brawls and terrorized women passengers who were huddled in the native schoolhouse.

Harry Stevens, one of the passengers, gave this account of what happened after the passengers, without help from the crew, had walked from the ocean to the village school, two miles away:

"I passed the first night ashore in the schoolroom together with about 30 other passengers and about four or five ship's officers, including the purser, the steward and the second officer.

"Throughout the night I heard members of the crew singing, joking about the passengers, cursing and fighting among themselves in an adjacent courtyard.

"And while most of the women present remained awake in fear of being molested, at least five members of the crew gave unmistakable evidence of being intoxicated and came across the courtyard and attempted to force their way into the room we occupied. These attempts were frustrated by the sec-

Emperor Confers.

By the United Press.

Tokyo (Tuesday), Jan. 11.—Japan's supreme war council meets with the cabinet and Emperor Hirohito today to adopt a fundamental policy toward China which observers believe will include "destruction" of the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

A series of extraordinary cabinet sessions, called by Prince Fumimaro Konoye, the prime minister, are understood to have outlined a program to be given the emperor.

Peace Terms Expected.

The program was understood to include:

1. Announcement of terms on which Japan is ready to make peace with China's fugitive government, headed by Acting Premier Dr. H. H. Kung and Chiang.

2. A formal declaration of war and a program of relentless warfare against the present Chinese central government until it is completely wiped out, if China refuses to accede to the peace proposals.

The conference's decisions are expected to be of world interest, in view of foreign implications in any program of action Japan takes in China.

The conference, fifth of this nature in the modern history of Japan, was summoned for 2 p. m.

Nearly every influential leader in Japan—representing political, civilian, army and navy interests—was included in the conference.

Opposing Views Noted.

The crisis was believed to have been precipitated by two fundamentally opposing views of the proper way to wage the war in China.

The strong military and naval group, headed by Admiral Nobumasa Suegetsu, has long favored an outright declaration of war and presumably setting up a Japanese-controlled puppet government in China.

The more moderate group has favored stifling Chinese resistance by holding areas now controlled and cutting off China's life-lines to the seacoast, until the Chinese government comes to terms with Japan.

Steamer Beached After Collision in New York Harbor

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The Coast Guard reported tonight that the steamer Southland had been beached off Staten Island after a collision in New York Harbor with the steamship Panama City.

The Coast Guard cutter Hudson and three patrol boats were reported standing by the Southland.

Foreign Policy Not Dictated By U. S. Investments, Hull Says

Abandonment of Citizens in Far East Would Harm Americans Everywhere, Secretary Replies to Congress' Query.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday declared American interest and concern in the Far East rests on a desire that "orderly processes in international relationships be maintained" and is not measured by the number of Americans residing in a particular country or by the amount of American investments or by the volume of trade.

This Government's interests in "supporting by peaceful means influences contributory to preservation and encouragement of orderly processes," the Secretary of State asserted, transcends in importance the value of American trade with or investments in China and "transcends even the question of safeguarding the immediate welfare of American citizens in China."

Secretary Hull further contended that "a policy of abandoning American nationals in any one part of the world would have inevitable and serious repercussions adverse to the legitimate rights of Americans and the legitimate interests of this country in other parts, in most parts of the world." He pointed out that Americans reside in practically every country of the world and that some 200,000 of the citizens of this Government go abroad annually.

As for the Far Eastern crisis, Hull asserted the United States is now engaged in China in affording appropriate protection for its nationals,

8 Prelates Held For Spying, Red Paper Reports

2 Bishops, 2 Nuns and 19 Priests Accused of Plotting.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Jan. 10.—Arrest of eight high Russian orthodox churchmen for Fascist espionage was indicated today by Soviet newspapers.

Numerous nuns and priests, said to have been recruited for spying, were involved.

The army newspaper Red Star declared that Metropolitan Theophan of Gorky, 270 miles east of Moscow, was leader of a band of spies, terrorists and saboteurs which included two bishops, two nuns and 19 priests.

The paper said a member of the band had admitted that it "took the line of Fascist Germany and Hitler in the hope the Soviet Union would be defeated in the coming war."

The archpriest of Gorky was charged with organizing "Sisters of the White Kerchief," who helped collect information on defense, industry, railroads, farms and schools to be sent abroad.

"The aim of the church spies was to weaken the rear of the Red army the moment war began" by organizing train wrecks, fires and sabotage, the Red Star stated.

Holdup Men Kill Archaeologist in Jerusalem Hills

Jerusalem, Jan. 10 (AP).—J. L. Starkey, director of a British archaeological expedition, was killed in a holdup near Hebron. Starkey's party had been excavating at Tel-el-Duweir, the site of ancient Lackhish.

Starkey had unearthed important tablets.

He was returning from the scene of the digging in the late afternoon with two Arab workmen when his automobile was ambushed by a gang of men on the little-used Beersheba-Hebron road.

The leader of the gang ordered the three from the car and told Starkey to walk away. The archaeologist was shot in the back after he had gone a few yards. The Arab workmen were spared.

Administration Foreign Policy Supported by Decisive Action.

Move Held Dead For This Session

Backers of Proposal, However Assert They Will Renew Fight.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a vote effectively upholding the Administration's hand in foreign relations, the House yesterday, by a 209 to 188 roll call ballot, refused to consider the Ludlow resolution for a popular referendum before declaration of war.

Action followed a written plea by the President and appeals from the floor by Speaker William B. Bankhead and Majority Leader Sam Rayburn. Refusal to discharge the Judiciary Committee from consideration of the resolution automatically blocked a direct vote on the war referendum amendment and achieved its defeat.

Debate Peril Averted.

A desperate leadership drive for votes preceded the floor show-down, as the Administration sought to avoid the hours of recriminating debate that appeared certain to follow discharge of the committee. But ultimate defeat of the amendment proper, (requiring a two-thirds vote), had never been in doubt.

Leaders regarded collapse of the discharge drive not only as strengthening the Executive's position in matters of foreign policy, but as definitely pigeonholing the war referendum proposal for the present session. Backers of the resolution nevertheless declared they would "carry on" and make the discharge vote an issue in the next elections.

Although 218 House members signed the Ludlow petition to force a vote, this number had dwindled to 188 when yesterday's test came. Only 21 Republicans voted with 188 Democrats to bar consideration, but it gave the margin necessary for Administration victory.

Republican Leader Bertrand H. Snell and some of his lieutenants stood with the majority leadership against the amendment, but 64 Republicans joined the 111 Democrats, 8 Progressives and 5 Farmer-Laborites who vainly voted to call up the amendment.

It was perhaps the only time the House had refused to consider a bill after a majority of the membership had petitioned for committee discharge.

In one of those rare instances when a speaker leaves the rostrum to appeal for votes, Speaker Bankhead read to the House a letter written him by the President, dated January 6.

Rayburn Adds Appeal.

"Such an amendment to the Constitution as that proposed would cripple any President in his conduct of our foreign relations, and it would encourage other nations to believe that they could violate American rights with impunity," the President wrote Bankhead.

"I fully realize that the sponsors of this proposal sincerely believe that it would be helpful in keeping the United States out of war. I am convinced it would have the opposite effect."

Tense galleries, jammed to the rafters, and a packed House, heard Speaker Bankhead call the approaching test "the gravest question that has been submitted to the Congress of the United States since I became a member of it more than 20 years ago."

Rayburn followed with the assertion that approval of the Ludlow

Sam Beard May Reach Through Lorton Bars To Take Over Nuckols' Gambling Throne

Chance and the Department of Justice may have settled, for a time at least, the question of succession to Washington's gambling throne left vacant by death of Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckols.

Sam Beard, former czar of bookmakers here, is back. He is by no means walking the streets of Washington, but he is at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va. Experts say that is within operating distance of the rackets he turned over to Nubby Nuckols when he abdicated two years ago by request.

Any possibility he may reach them, however, was discounted yesterday by Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of Federal prisons. "Beard won't control the underworld of Washington," Huff said. "Not while he's at Lorton. He'll have the same mess, he'll observe the same rules the rest of the inmates do, and as far as I'm concerned, he's just another prisoner."

When Beard was convicted, the prosecutor requested he be sentenced to serve in some penitentiary at a distance from Washington so his connections with the Washington underworld would be drawn thin enough to break. He went to Atlanta and there he stayed until recently.

Washington's leading civil agency for combating crime now is trying to have Beard moved from Lorton.

The Washington Criminal Justice Association, according to Dr. James Allen Nolan, executive director, will make very definite representations to the Department of Justice to have Beard removed.

He was returned here, Dr. Nolan explained, when 15 Lorton prisoners, considered too tough for confinement facilities at Lorton, were transferred to Atlanta. Beard was one of 13 short-term prisoners, considered amenable to conditions at Lorton, brought here in exchange.

"The exchange was made by authority of ——— Huff," Dr. Nolan said, "but I'm sure if Mr. Huff had any knowledge of the community situation here he would not have permitted Beard's return to a prison so near Washington."

"We could have kept the 15 men that we sent to Atlanta if we had a wall around the reformatory," Huff said, explaining the trade with Atlanta.

Holding Firm Control Ruling Expected Soon

Supreme Court to Hear Arguments February 7 on Regulation Law.

By the Associated Press.

An early Supreme Court decision on the Roosevelt Administration law regulating utility holding companies appeared probable after the high tribunal yesterday agreed to hear arguments February 7.

Decisions customarily are announced within a few weeks after arguments.

The Electric Bond & Share Co. had challenged the act, and Government attorneys requested disposal of the case as speedily as possible. They said the Securities Commission had delayed enforcing provisions of the act pending a decision.

PWA Power Speeded.

The court also opened the way for immediate construction of Federally financed public power plants in four Alabama communities. It granted a Government request that a decision the tribunal made a week ago become effective at once instead of at the end of the customary 25 days. In that decision the tribunal said the Alabama Power Co. had no right to challenge the legality of PWA loans and grants for public power projects.

In a ruling yesterday the court determined, 6 to 3, that American citizens must pay Federal income tax on dividends from British corporations even when the dividends are withheld by the corporations for payment of income tax to Great Britain. Justices McReynolds, Sutherland and Butler dissented without a written opinion.

DuPont Firm Refused Review.

The tribunal refused to review a decision of the Board of Tax Appeals and a lower court requiring Almours Securities, Inc., formed by Alfred I. duPont, of Wilmington, Del., to pay $2,069,822 in Federal taxes for 1931 and 1932.

In addition to regular income tax, the tax board decided that the corporation must pay a 50 per cent levy on net income, under a revenue law provision aimed at corporations formed or used to prevent the "imposition of the surtax upon its shareholders through the medium of permitting its gains and profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed."

I. C. C. Committee Asks $50,000 Quiz Of Auto Makers

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee recommended yesterday a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the practices of manufacturers and dealers in connection with the distribution and sale of automobiles, to cost up to $50,000.

The committee reported favorably a resolution by Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, which would direct the Trade Commission to determine whether agreements between automobile manufacturers and dealers were "fair and equitable."

The commission would also be directed to find whether dealers had an opportunity to earn a reasonable profit, whether manufacturers "employ coercion to the detriment of the dealer, the consumer and the public" and whether "unfair trade practices now employed by dealers are caused by the policies pursued by the manufacturers."

Doughton to Open Tax Revision Bill Hearings Friday

By the United Press.

The Administration's tax revision bill will start its way through Congress Friday with the first of public hearings on the measure, Chairman Robert L. Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, announced last night.

First witnesses will be Treasury officials who co-operated with the sub-committee in preparing the tax changes. No official estimates have been made on the amount of revenue involved in the revisions, but committee members said they have followed President Roosevelt's instructions not to reduce the aggregate Federal collections.

Politics and People

House Defeat of Ludlow Bill Is Called Token of Confidence in President and Hull.

By Franklyn Waltman

DEFEAT of the absurd and dangerous Ludlow resolution for a war referendum amendment to the Constitution is evidence that even the House of Representatives can rise to its responsibilities when the occasion becomes sufficiently serious. Yet the margin between success and defeat for the discharge motion was so slim as to leave a feeling of discomfort about Congress acting rationally when dealing with foreign affairs.

WALTMAN.

The important result, however, was that control of American foreign relations will be left in the hands of the President and his able Secretary of State, where the Constitution places them. After all was said, the issue before the House remained a question of confidence in the Administration's handling of American foreign relations.

It was not, as some would have us believe, a question of whether America will go to war or remain at peace. Undoubtedly today there are many very sincere, if overly emotional, men and women, who feel that the cause of keeping this country out of war has been given a serious setback. Indeed, judging from one lady's radio broadcast, some of these misguided pacifists seem to feel a definite step toward war has been taken.

* * * *

Such fears and apprehensions, however, are unfounded. If this country becomes involved in another war it will be because Congress unwisely has refused to have confidence in the President and has placed him in a strait jacket where he cannot exercise reasonable discretion—not because of the defeat of such will o' wisps as the Ludlow resolution.

* * * *

As readers of this column know, its author has not engaged in any special pleading on behalf of the Roosevelt Administration. He has tried to view its actions and policies coldly and objectively, with a critical eye. But he is convinced President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull are as anxious and determined to keep this country at peace as any of the cornfield statesmen on Capitol Hill are.

The only difference between that highly articulate band of advocates of mis-called neutrality legislation and war referendums on Capitol Hill and the President and his Secretary of State is that the former are highly emotional—and sometimes hysterical—while the latter have proceeded in a rational manner.

This business of keeping a country out of war in a world surcharged with high tension, as this one is at this time, cannot be achieved by wishes nor by pious hopes and intentions. It is a grim business, requiring all the skill and ability and knowledge that men can acquire in a lifetime. It is not achieved, as the Baltimore Sun said yesterday, by scuttling into a hole and then attempting to pull the hole in after you.

Another difficulty attending the problem is the lack of understanding of what is involved. Most of those on Capitol Hill who bellow for strict neutrality legislation and letting the people have the right to vote on whether they wish to go to war, usually approach the problem by talking about American interests involved in a given situation or the amount of trade or the bankers' stake.

They would have the country believe Secretary Hull manifests a deep interest in the present Sino-Japanese conflict because there are American Standard Oil tankers on the Yangtze River, or because some Americans have money invested there or because we hope to increase our foreign trade with China.

As set forth by Secretary Hull in his letter to Vice President Garner, the record, if any of these climb-in-a-hole-and-pull-it-after-you advocates would only look at it, makes such talk so much piffle. That record shows that the tangible, material interests of this country in China negligible. Indeed, if this Government was pursuing dollar diplomacy it would at this moment be giving encouragement to Japan—because our stake in that country is very much greater.

In his letter to Vice President Garner, Mr. Hull made it clear that this country's foreign policy is not predicated on the number of Americans residing in a particular country nor on the amount of investment nor on the trade possibilities.

"There is a broader and much more fundamental interest—which is that orderly processes in international relationships be maintained," Secretary Hull wrote, and went on to cite the principles guiding him as he enunciated them last July. In a world rapidly turning to anarchy in international relationships, it is of the utmost importance to this country that "orderly processes" be maintained. When they are generally ignored the decadence of America will commence.

One thing more needs to be said regarding the vote on the Ludlow resolution. From time to time we have heard a great deal of the need for leadership in the Republican Party. Well, in this fight it had leadership, firm and unequivocal. Alf M. Landon, the party's last standard bearer and its national titular leader, and Henry L. Stimson, the last Republican Secretary of State, took a firm stand against the Ludlow resolution. Indeed, Mr. Stimson's attack on the proposal was the most comprehensive and devastating made on it. Republican House Leader Bertrand H. Snell made known his opposition in advance and voted with the Administration.

There was the leadership. What did the followers do? Three times as many Republicans voted to discharge the Rules Committee on the Ludlow resolution as voted against that motion. Altogether 84 Republicans voted for the Ludlow discharge motion, 21 voted against it.

Those 21 Republicans, who incidentally provided the exact margin by which the motion was defeated, may take consolation in the fact that they saved their party from being responsible for a stupid blunder—but it is small consolation, and it makes all this talk about the party needing leaders look a little silly. What it needs is a few intelligent followers in responsible places.

House Backs Roosevelt Policy, Kills War Referendum, 209-188

plan by Congress would be "the most tremendous blunder it has ever made since the formation of our Government under the Constitution."

Rayburn said a vote to discharge the committee "would do more ultimately to plunge this country into war than any action this country could take."

Te 29-minute debate was precipitated when Representative Louis Ludlow, Indiana Democrat and former Washington newspaper correspondent, rose and moved for committee discharge of his plan.

Ludlow, whose proposed Constitutional amendment provides for a national referendum before war can be declared except in case of armed invasion or violation of the Monroe Doctrine, earlier in the morning had conferred with his steering committee on modifying amendments.

Sally after sally of applause greeted speakers on both sides of the issue. Toward the end, there were standing ovations as two Democrats were brought in on wheelchairs to vote against consideration. They were Representatives Costello, of California, and Whelchel, of Georgia, recuperating from injuries suffered in motor accidents. The Administration had reached out to bring in every possible vote.

Peace organizations supporting the Ludlow amendment, affiliated with the National Council for Prevention of War, in a statment last night charged "the Administration was able to prevent consideration only by turning the full battery of its influence on Congress."

The statement claimed "a political advance for the peace forces" and "an actual set-back and warning to the Government."

"The exhibition today of Presidential control of Congress in peacetime," said the council, "shows clearly that Congress cannot be counted on to check the Administration in any war crisis. It is a clear argument for the necessity of giving the people themselves the right to vote on war issues."

Presentation of the Administration's case against the Ludlow plan was dramatized by Speaker Bankhead, schooled for the stage who has carried on its tradition in politics.

Bearing the President's letter, Bankhead held it as the peroration to his carefully measured remarks. He said he left the rostrum to speak from the floor only becase he believed the proposed war referendum means a "radical" and a "revolutionary" attack "upon the fundamental basic principles of the representative democracy of a free people."

"I am unwilling, my colleagues," he said, "to abandon, even though I recognize there is a great temporary sentiment among our people for the resolution—the wisdom and judgment of the framers of our Constitution who established the fundamental law, our Constitution, and depart from it in times like these, and say that no longer the people of this country are willing to trust their chosen representatives in Congress to reflect their views or to protect the security of the public."

Then he disclosed that "those are the views of the Chief Executive of this Nation, our commander-in-chief, a man who loves peace as passionately and devotedly as any man who breathes the air of God."

The President wrote Bankhead that "in response to your request for an expression of my views respecting the proposed resolution for a referendum vote as a prerequisite for a declaration of war, I must frankly state that I consider that the proposed amendment would be impracticable in its application and incompatible with our representative form of government.

"Our Government," Mr. Roosevelt's letter said, "is conducted by the people through representatives of their own choosing. It is with singular unanimity that the founders of the Republic agreed upon such free and representative form of government as the only practical means of government by the people."

Speakers for the Ludlow amendment denied it was "a threat to representative democracy." Representative Gerald J. Boileau, (Progressive), Wisconsin, pointed to provisions of the Administration's farm bill calling for farm referenda on questions of policy. If farmers can determine whether they will lead "little pigs to slaughter," he said, they should be allowed to say whether "their sons and daughters shall be led to slaughter on the battlefield."

Representative E. V. Izac (Democrat), California, denied the referendum would handicap the Government, and Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, said he had "faith and profound confidence in the American people and in their ability to decide on this awful question." Later Fish declared "the fight has just begun" and predicted the resolution "will be an issue in every primary and Congressional election."

Financial Basis Of China Policy Denied by Hull

as it always has done and that it is "also upholding principles, as it has always done." It has asked and is asking, he added, that "the rights of the United States and the rights of our people be respected and at the same time it has sought and is seeking to avoid involvement of this country in the disputes of other countries."

Secretary Hull made these declarations in a letter to Vice President John N. Garner, responding to a Senate resolution asking for information regarding the number of Americans in China, the amount of American investments there and the number of American military and naval personnel in that country.

Hull made the letter public shortly after returning from the White House where he, with Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, discussed with President Roosevelt plans for a supplemental naval building program. At its conclusion, it was said no final conclusions had been reached, except that a program would be projected by the President in the next few days.

Cruisers, Carriers Most Likely.

It was indicated Mr. Roosevelt would ask Congress to authorize a naval building program supplemental to the existing Trammell-Vinson program authorized in 1934. Whether additional funds will be asked of this session of Congress to start the supplemental program was not revealed. The Navy has built or is building cruisers and aircraft carriers to the limit of its authorization under the 1934 legislation. Thus it was assumed the proposed legislation would provide increased tonnage especially in these categories. Authority still exists for constructing seven battleships in addition to those building or projected.

6,000 Americans in China.

Hull explained the department's records indicated there were approximately 10,500 American nationals in China at the time of the outbreak of the present Sino-Japanese hostilities last July and that of this number 4,600 had been evacuated up to November 6, so that "there now are in China approximately 6,000 American Nationals."

He stated that there were now 528 Marines in Peiping, 814 officers and enlisted men of the Army at Tientsin and 2,555 Marines at Shanghai.

Hull said the Navy Department had informed him that at this time thre are 129 officers and 1,671 enlisterd men aboard 13 United States naval vessels in Chinese waters.

Investments $237,000,000.

The Secretary of State said he had no direct information regarding the identity of American investors in China. Using Commerce Department figures, based in part on findings in 1933 by Prof. Carl Remer, he estimated the total of American investments in China at $132,000,000, plus $40,000000 of Chinese obligations that have been in default since the World War between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 of property owned by Americans permanently residing in China and about $40,000,000 representing the value of the property of American missionary and charitable organizations in China.

After explaining this country's authority for keeping armed forces in China—rights based on treaties—Hull declared these forces are there "for the protection of American nationals primarily against mobs or other uncontrollable elements." He added that "they have no mission of aggression." This Government, prior to the present Sino-Japanese hostilities, had reasonable expectations that these armed forces "might soon be withdrawn from China in an orderly way," Hull said. But, he continued, the normal trend of events, however, was interrupted when fighting broke out and spread to various parts of China."

Cites Spanish Civil War.

He also recalled that this country at one time maintained a naval squadron in the Mediterranean to afford protection to American nationals and that on the outbreak of the present Spanish civil war it sent naval vessels to Spanish ports to afford relief to its nationals in that country. It still maintains three vessels in proximity to Spanish waters for this purpose, he said.

"Thus," he continued, what the Government of the United States is doing in China is entirely consistent with long-established policy and practice of the United States and the well-recognized duty of the Government to afford protection to American nationals.

World Position in Balance.

"In connection with the problem of affording appropriate protection to Americans in China there must be kept in mind the fact that we have nationals residing in practically every country of the world and that every year some 200,000 of our citizens go abroad; that these include large numbers of students, teachers, religious leaders, laborers, executives and merchants, men and women and children; that the number of Americans proceeding abroad for business purposes is not greater than, is probably less than, the number who go abroad for educational, cultural and philanthropic purposes, and that a policy of abandoning American nationals in any one part of the world would have inevitable and serious repercussions adverse to the legitimate rights of Americans and the legitimate interests of this country in other parts, in most parts of the world.

"In emergency situations such as that which now prevails in the Far East, the Government endeavors to pursue in regard to the question of affording appropriate protection a course based upon calm reason. We endeavor to afford those measures of protection which are called for by and are in accord with the realities of the situation.

"Appropriate Protection."

"In the present situation in the Far East, the Government of the United States is affording appropriate protection and assistance to American nationals, as this Government always has done. The American Government is also upholding principles, as it has always done. It has asked and is asking that the rights of the United States and the rights of our people be respected and at the same time it has sought and is seeking to avoid involvement of this country in the disputes of other countries."

Secretary Hull concluded his letter by referring to the principles underlying American foreign policy which he enunciated on July 16, last, and an elaboration of that declaration issued on August 23 last, both of which were published at the time and subsequently in The Washington Post. He inclosed copies of those statements for the information of the Senate.

Moley Calls Speech By Jackson 'Vague'

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP).—Branding what he termed the "soapbox philippics" of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson against big business as "completely vague," Dr. Raymond E. Moley, former "brain-truster," charged today that the President is making a vain attempt to blend two irreconcilable policies.

Dixie Graves Relinquishes Senate Seat to Hill

Gustav Writes President.

W. Bostrom, Swedish Minister to Washington, presented a letter of greeting to President Roosevelt yesterday from King Gustav.

Rep. Hill Takes His Place as a Senator Today

Mrs. Graves Resigns, Thanking Colleagues for Aid; Lauds Roosevelt.

In a Senate chamber still resounding with bitter debate over the anti-lynching bill, a tall, dark-eyed woman arose late in the afternoon yesterday to announce her resignation as Senator from Alabama.

In a brief and tender speech that seemed almost out of place after the furious assaults of the day, Dixie Bibb Graves, Senator for almost five months, paid a quiet tribute to members of the Senate and to President Roosevelt. She said:

"My ignorance was shielded, and my steps guided by you men who have come together to counsel for the good of the country, by you who seek to plan the more abundant life in a spirit of peace and harmony."

The members were still and grave as she continued by praising the "inspiring leadership of that man who sits quietly in the White House—that man, born to riches and clothed in privilege who has passionately sought for social justice." She concluded with the simple remark: "I know all will be well with the American people."

Her husband, Gov. Bibb Graves, of Alabama, at once appointed Lister Hill, a Representative from Alabama, recently victorious over former Senator J. Thomas Heflin in the January 4 Senatorial primary in Alabama. Hill will take Mrs. Graves' seat today. He delayed taking his new office until he voted against discharge of the Ludlow amendment in the House yesterday.

Telegraphists Attack Wire Company's Union

By the Associated Press.

The American Radio and Telegraphists Association asked the Labor Relations Board yesterday to order the Association of Western Union Employes to return $500,000 in dues the union said had been collected since the Wagner Act was passed. The union in Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate.

The petition alleged the Western Union Association was an illegal "company union." The board was asked to order its dissolution.

Nubby Nuckols Buried as Gang Stands Guard

By Howard F. Wentworth,
A Staff Correspondent

Richmond, Jan. 10.—Barons of Washington's underworld rubbed elbows with cavaliers of Virginia in Richmond's beautiful Hollywood Cemetery today to see Carroll Peyton (Nubby) Nuckols lowered into his grave.

Full contingents of the gambling elements of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Richmond also heard the simple funeral services and heard the heavy clods thump on the coffin of Washington's erstwhile king of bookmaking. And they kept wary guard to see that nothing went amiss.

And to the final prayer by the Rev. Carroll Roberts, pastor of Hanover Avenue Christian Church, Nubby was guarded from prying eyes by his still-loyal legion of stalwarts.

More than 50 automobiles formed the funeral cortege from the home of Nubby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Nuckols, 3218 Stuart avenue.

The modest brick dwelling was jammed to overflowing long before Mr. Roberts arrived to conduct services.

On the sidewalk outside—and on corners for two blocks distance—stood small groups of nattily-clad men, conversing in undertones and eyeing carefully every stranger who approached the house.

Only close relatives and friends gained admittance to the services. The rest, and there appeared to be nearly 100, seemed satisfied to pay their respects from a distance.

A cold wind lashed the cemetery hillside as Nuckols was lowered into his fina resting place. Mr. Roberts repeated the Twenty-third Psalm.

For many moments after Mr. Roberts completed his graveside services, such Washington characters as Edward "Mickey" McDonald, and Abe Plisco, alias William Deitz, were seen standing with bowed heads.

Sixteenth Street Becomes a Hospital Emergency Room

Post Staff Photo

Police diverted traffic for 15 minutes last night while an interne applied splints to the fractured legs of a traffic victim at Sixteenth street and Meridian place northwest. The victim, Mary Snowden, 55, of 654 Morton street northwest, also suffering a fractured collarbone, lay in agony on the pavement. A passerby attempted to ease her pain and a policeman held a flashlight for the interne. Note the box of pain tablets on the pavement. As soon as the broken bones were held firmly in place, the woman was removed to a hospital.

110 Will Share Lindbergh Case Reward Money

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 10.—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman today gave nine men and a woman $22,000 of New Jersey's $25,000 reward for capture of the Linbergh baby murderer. He reserved the remainder for more than 100 others and reiterated his belief the case was not completely solved with the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

The Bronx service station manager, Walter Lyle, now of Elizabeth, N. J., who jotted Hauptmann's automobile license number on a $10 bill—part of the $50,000 which Col. Charles A. Lindbergh paid in a futile effort to regain his child—was awarded $7,500.

William J. Allen, of Trenton, colored truck driver whose discovery of the baby's body in a roadside thicket in May, 1932, ended a 72-day search for the infant, won $5,000.

Others who traced ransom money to Hauptmann and witnesses against the Bronx carpenter at his Flemington trial were included in Hoffman's distribution.

John J. Lyons, who worked with Lyle and took the $10 bill to a bank, received $1,000, and $2,000 shares went to William Strong, the teller who identified the note, and William F. Cody, a bank teller, who picked out a $5 note paid in a New York theater as part of the ransome money.

Celia Barr, theater ticket seller, who identified Hauptmann as the man who gave her a $5 ransom note; Amandus Hochmuth, and Millard Whited, who said they saw Hauptmann near the Lindberghs' Sourland Mountain estate; and Joseph Perrone, taxi driver, who said he took a note from Hauptmann to Dr. John F. Condon, ransom intermediary, each received $1,000.

Charles Rossiter, of Bridgeton, who said he saw Hauptmann near Princeton, was given $500.

Hoffman said Treasury agents and bank tellers who helped trace ransom notes would get $25 each.

The $25,000 reward was offered by the then Gov. A. Harry Moore, in May, 1932. Hauptmann was executed April 3, 1936, but no money was available for the reward until the 1937 Legislature appropriated it.

One Sheriff Jails Second in Failure To Help Manhunt

Elizabethton, Tenn., Jan. 10 (AP).—Ten persons, including Sheriff W. L. Wallin of Bledsoe County, were in Carter County Jail tonight pending arraignment in connection with a dynamite blast that killed three children near here Friday.

Sheriff J. M. Moreland said three men, booked as White and Crave Tollett and Lee Walker, all of Pikeville, Tenn., were charged with murder and that Wallin, also of Pikeville, was charged with being an accessory after the fact.

The Bledsoe officer and Crave Tollett, Moreland declared, were arrested early today when they came here voluntarily. He said he arrested Wallin because of his failure "to comply with our requests to arrest the Tollett boys." Carter County officers had been searching for Crave Tollett since Friday.

Police Seize 2 Men In Drive Against 'Numbers' Racket

Police yesterday continued their drive to stamp out street-corner "numbers" bookies with the arrest of two men in the 300 block I street northeast.

Sergt. George Deyoe and vice squad detectives who made the arrest, said the pair raises the total of policy arrests during the past week to 25.

Booked on charges of operating a lottery, yesterday's suspects gave their names at Tony Pellicci, 62, 300 block I street northeast, and James J. Darr, 20, 400 block I street northeast.

Both were released under $2,000 each for a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning.

Gobel Firm Plans Fight for Abattoir

Attorneys for Adolf Gobel, Inc., yesterday indicated that they would challenge authority of the District Commissioners to declare void the abattoir permit for construction.

D. Edward Clarke, attorney, will meet this morning with Frank M. Firor, of New York, president of the company, it was stated.

"It looks as if we will have to resume work as soon as we can get a few matters straightened out," Clarke said.

The Commissioners have not yet notified the firm that they consider the Gobel permit void because there has been no continuous work on the Benning construction since September 7.

Spectator Saves Man As Two Women Drown

Wellsburg, W. Va., Jan. 10 (AP).—A spectator broke ice and dived into a creek tonight to save the life of one of three occupants of a car which had plunged into the stream. Mrs. Ross Fields and Mrs. William Miller, both of Weirton, W. Va., were drowned.

Ross Fields, a prizefighter, was rescued by Thurman Campbell, and taken, in a serious condition, to a Steubenville hospital.

Boy Suffers Broken Leg When Hit by Automobile

James E. Stewart, 5 years old, suffered a broken leg when hit by an automobile last night while playing in the street near his home at 2102 Thirty-seventh street northwest. He was taken to Georgetown Hospital. Police said the machine was driven by Albert Schatz, 29, of 4961 Quebec street northwest.

Man Who Quit Job To Seek Another Ends Life With Gas

With the door and windows sealed with paper, George E. DeVaughan, 29, 2528 Seventeenth street northwest, was found dead in the kitchen of his home by his wife. Resuscitation efforts failed.

Gas was flowing from four burners on the stove, Mrs. Carol DeVaughan told police.

A note found in the room said:

"Dearest, I still love you. As your life goes on give me a thought of the things that might have been. George."

Mrs. DeVaughan said her husband until two weeks ago was employed by an air conditioning firm but resigned "to get a better job." He had been despondent, she said. Mrs. DeVaughan has two small children.

U.S. and Canada Confer on Air Commerce Pact

Parleys May Co-ordinate Facilities to Aid Transport Fliers.

Canadian and American aviation officials yesterday began a series of conferences, expected to last nearly a week, in an effort to remove hindrances to air commerce between the two countries.

Headed by Col. V. I. Smart, deputy minister of transport, the Canadian delegation was received informally by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who expressed best wishes for success of the conversations. Members of the American Interdepartmental Committee on Civil International Aviation, led by R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, were also present to meet the Canadian delegation.

Flights between the two countries now are regulated by a 1929 agreement, which needs to be brought up to dtae, State Department officials said yesterday.

Conferees said they hoped to dovetail facilities so that a flyer leaving American radio navigation beams on a trip to Canada would have only to change his identifying call signal.

Frequencies, they said, would not change under this plan; the same system of light signals would be used and weather reports would be co-ordinated.

Jersey Highway Body's Own Car Fails Safety-Test

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 10 (AP).—Amid Jersey motorists' chuckles and red-faced official chagrin, the State motor vehicle department's own No. 1 car was the first to flunk the test today as compulsory inspection of 1,000,000 vehicles started in New Jersey.

The car, with Deputy Commissioner William J. Dearden at the wheel, failed to gain a green windshield sticker of approval and was sent away for repairs.

Lone Bandit Robs Laundry; Gets $19

Entering a laundry at Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest, at the height of the rush hour last night, a colored bandit forced a woman clerk into a back room and escaped with the day's receipts.

Beatrice K. [illegible]chrach, 17 Magnolia parkway, Chevy Chase, who was held up about four years ago in the same store, said the man took about $19 in bills, but left an equal amount of change in the cash drawer. She described the robber as about 35, light skinned, wearing a gray overcoat and tan cap and about 5 feet 7 inches tall.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties. BUT, if you are cross, lifeless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure.

Md. U. Officials To Be Called in Suicide Inquiry

Former Professor Found Dead; Police Keep Last Notes Secret.

Three University of Maryland officials will be summoned before a coroner's hearing January 19 for questioning as to the causes leading to the suicide of Sidney W. Wentworth, 44-year-old former associate professor at the University, whose body was found in University Park, Md., yesterday.

The body of Wentworth, who resigned from the university about a year ago, was found at University drive and Rush road by Melvin Simms, of Berwyn, shortly after 7 a. m. He had been shot between the eyes with a shotgun.

Justice of the Peace Fred C. Lutz, who will preside at the hearing, said the inquiry into the causes of the suicide was scheduled following a conference with State's Attorney Alan Bowie.

Two notes left by Wentworth are said to have mentioned certain University of Maryland officials. Police refused to reveal the contents of the notes, stating that "we can't ruin the whole lives of prominent men."

The notes, one found on Wentworth's body and the other pinned to his pillow, are believed to have accused certain officials with standing in the way of the dead man's advancement at the school.

A captain in the Marine Corps in the World War, Wentworth came to the university in 1929, resigning last September after a year's illness. He was a specialist in apple growing in the department of horticulture at the institution and was a graduate of the University of New Hampshire and Cornell University.

Funeral services will be held Thursday at 1 p. m. at Gasch's funeral home in Hyattsville, Md. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Firemen Rescue Michigan Bishop

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 10 (AP).—Firemen rescued Bishop Joseph H. Albers from the flaming chancery of the Lansing Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church today.

Overcome by smoke, the bishop was taken to St. Lawrence Hospital.

Firemen said the bishop was awakened at 6:30 a. m. by the odor of smoke, and found flames blocked his escape. He ran to a window to call for help and collapsed as smoke billowed about him.

Drunk-Driving Pastor Fined and Sentenced

Indiana, Pa., Jan. 10 (AP).—A 50-year-old minister who Judge E. E. Creps said testified he was drinking sloe gin to cure an attack of indigestion, and didn't know what it was, was found guilty of driving under the influence of liquor in Indiana County Court today. Judge Creps fined the Rev. J. C. Glenn, of Lemoyne, Pa., $200 and costs, and sentenced the clergyman to serve from 6 to 12 months in Allegheny County Workhouse.

'Unknown' to Head Polish Nationalists

Warsaw, Jan. 10 (AP).—Gen. Stanaslas Skwarczynski, hitherto politically unknown, tomorrow will assume leadership of the Polish Nationalist movement, replacing Col. Adam Koc, former president of the Bank of Poland.

The new leader is a close friend of Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's "strong man," who formulated the Nationalist program. The official announcement said Koc was retiring because of ill health.

Observers assumed Skwarczynski's appointment would bring a more energetic development of the Nationalist movement, main points of which are stronger national defenses, opposition to communism and what is interpreted by Jews as approval of anti-Semitic economic pressure, but disapproval of anti-Semitic violence.

District Traffic Safety Crusade Opens Tonight

Rep. Schulte Sponsors Rally as Death Toll for Year Goes to 3.

The radio, movies and the press will be enlisted tonight in what promises to be a gigantic publicity drive to make Washingtonians traffic-conscious.

Sponsored by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, newly-appointed chairman of the traffic sub-committee of the House District Committee, the drive will seek so to publicize fatal auto accidents as to make drivers drive safely and pedestrians walk with caution.

Third Traffic Victim Dies.

A Christmas Eve auto tragedy, meanwhile, took its second victim with the death in Emergency Hospital of a Smithfield (Va.) resident, injured in a collision on Highway Bridge. The fatality was the third in the District this year. A 5-year-old boy and and elderly woman were hurt in other mishaps.

Schulte yesterday invited representatives of all four local radio stations, the newspapers and the motion picture theaters to meet with the sub-committee at 7:15 o'clock tonight in his office to map the campaign.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Inspector William E. Holmes, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, and Melvin Sharpe, of the Traffic Advisory Council, also will be on hand.

"We are going to try to eliminate death from the streets," he said.

One of several plans Schulte has in mind is to have police report fatal accidents immediately to the broadcasting stations, which in turn will broadcast them to the city. The broadcast would report the names of the auto driver and the victim, the location of the accident, etc., and would conclude with a warning against reckless driving or jaywalking.

Will Call Truck Owners.

Later in the week, possibly Thursday night, Schulte plans to call in all the operators of two or more trucks.

"I am going to suggest that they hold every driver personally responsible for accidents," he said. "If they don't co-operate, I will introduce a bill to have their licenses taken away from them."

Subsequently taxicab drivers, public school officials and others will be invited to "pep" meetings.

"I believe the people of Washington already are beginning to get traffic conscious as a result of our work during the special session," he said.

"There have been only two deaths so far this year. But we are out to make a much better record than that."

Charles Snyder, 75, of Smithfield, Va., succumbed in Emergency Hospital yesterday to injuries suffered in a traffic collision which took his wife's life.

The accident occured Christmas Eve when the Snyder's car collided with one driven by Harry J. Haynes, 25, of 707 Rock Creek Church road northwest, 200 feet south of the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

Mrs. Snyder was killed instantly. Her husband sustained a fractured skull. The death was the third District fatality this year.

Boy, 5, Break Leg.

An inquest at which Haynes will appear will be held probably at the end of the week.

Raymond Hogan, 19, of 2701 Nichols avenue southeast, received cuts and bruises when he was knocked from his bicycle on H street northwest between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

He was taken to Emergency Hospital by Hubert E. Bradburn, 43, of 511 Nicholson street northwest, driver of the car.

Five-year-old James E. Stewart, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stewart, 2103 Thirty-seventh street northwest, suffered a fractured leg when he was struck by an automobile while playing in the street in front of his home. Police said the driver of the car was Albert Schatz, 29, of 4961 Quebec street northwest, an employe of the Lincoln National Bank. The boy was taken to Georgetown Hospital.

Mary Snowden, 55, colored, 654 Morton street northwest, suffered fractures of both legs and the collarbone when struck by an auto at Sixteenth street and Meridian place northwest. Police held up traffic for 15 minutes while members of an ambulance crew gave the woman first aid in the street.

Clyde B. Vaughan, 2321 Eighteenth street northwest, was the driver of the car, according to police.

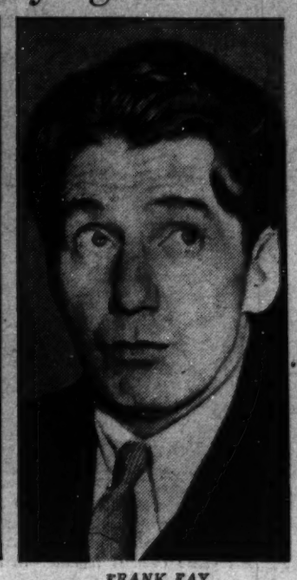
Barbara Stanwyck Wants Fay Quizzed for Praying Too Much

BARBARA STANWYCK.



FRANK FAY.

Actress Calls Ex-Husband Eccentric, Irrational; Cites Muttering Over Each Cigaret and Whenever He Passes a Church.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—A psychiatric examination for Frank Fay was demanded today by attorneys for his former wife, Barbara Stanwyck, who is resisting Fay's efforts to visit their 5-year-old adopted son.

The proposal for a psychiatric examination was made in arguments over the filing of ten affidavits attributing eccentricities and irrational conduct to the actor.

"I would suggest," Charles W. Cradick, representing the film actress, told Judge Goodwin J. Knight, "that the court appoint an investigator to inquire into all the circumstances related in the affidavits."

Philip Stein, attorney for Fay, protested and suggested that "we would like to have the opportunity of having Miss Stanwyck examined and her fitness determined."

The principal affadavit was one of Miss Stanwyck herself. In it, she expressed the belief that some bodily harm might befall the child if Fay were permitted to see Dion Anthony Fay.

The affidavits charged that Fay muttered a prayer over each cigette he smoked; that he once threw the boy into a swimming pool; that he mutters prayers while driving an automobile whenever he passes a church, endangering the lives of others by his conduct; that he bursts out with such phrases as "Lord help us" and "amen" and "have mercy on us," when he reads a newspaper or book, but will intersperse these exclamations with profane language if he reads something which displeases him; that he once engaged in a fist fight with the late Ted Healy, but stopped the fight to look for his false teeth, which Healy had knocked out; that he drinks to excess.

Lawyer Found Shot in Rear of Laundry Office

Burns Indicate Attempt at Suicide After Words With Wife.

Mortimer Lonyay, 53-year-old attorney, was in Emergency Hospital last night near death from a bullet wound in his chest as police attempted to unravel a mysterious set of facts.

Lonyay was found, probably fatally injured in a Chinese laundry at 1785 Florida avenue northwest by Henry Leo, Chinese laundryman.

The wounded man told Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty that a gun owned by Leo had gone off accidentally while he was examining it. Powder burns on Lonyay's chest, however, led Flaherty to believe the wound was self-inflicted.

Leo said Lonyay, estranged from his wife, appeared at the laundry yesterday morning, despondent because of the separation.

The laundry owner related that he telephoned Mrs. Cora Lonyay and that she joined her husband, but left the shop after an argument developed.

After Mrs. Lonyay had gone, Leo declared, he left Lonyay alone in the store for a time. When he returned, Lonyay was lying on a cot in a back room and complained of feeling ill. Leo said he had a doctor called, then observed blood and realized his friend had been shot.

At Emergency Hospital, physicians said the bullet had punctured Lonyay's lung. His condition was held critical.

Lonyay lived at 1757 Euclid street. His landlady said he returned from a trip Sunday.

Lynch Bill Foes Warn It Might Shatter Party

think news may have come from the White House that their nomination is going to be sent to the Senate to fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court . . . had better beware.

"They do not add to their standing as lawyers or their qualifications for places on the highest tribunal in this land by voting for such a legislative monstrosity as that now pending before the Senate, which destroys the dual form of government and robs the States of their sovereignty."

Harrison said he was "frank to admit that I do not want to see on the bench a man who disregards the law and the Constitution in any such manner."

He said the South has remained "faithful" to the Democratic party "in season and out of season" since Civil War and reconstruction days "because they believed that the Democratic party would stand as guard to co-operate with them in the protection of white civilization of the South."

Assails Trust Betrayed.

"But now," he went on, "with the Democrats in control in the Senate as they are by the greatest majority we ever had, we see the people of the South confronted with the terrible situation of a Democratic majority betraying the trust of the Southern people, destroying the things that they have idolized and in which they believe."

The Mississippian declared the bill "will not appease anybody;" that groups supporting the bill may be satisfied "for a little while, but paid lobbyists and representatives of these organized groups are never quiet" and "when they have had this work performed they must get to work upon another thing."

Quoting words of President Jackson, Harrison said he hoped his colleagues "who paid $100 for duck dinners" at the Jackson Day dinner would think of Jackson's contentions that destruction of State governments or their controls over local matters would "lead directly to revolution and anarchy." Harrison said the anti-lynching bill put fear "into the hearts of the womanhood" of the South, and was "an insult to the progress the Southern people have made in trying to have law enforcement."

Both Harrison and Miller praised Senator Borah, Idaho Republican, who last week championed the position taken by Southern opponents of the bill. Harrison said "he will go down in history as a great Senator." Borah ducked out of the chamber during the eulogy.

Bill Called Camouflage.

Senator Miller opened with his own analysis of the bill "as one who has practiced law" and declared the measure was "not aimed at the South any more than it is aimed at our form of government." He said he could not understand how followers of Jackson and Jefferson could concede the right of the Federal Government to regulate purely local affairs.

At one point, Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, opposition floor manager, called attention to the absence from the chamber of the bill's co-author—Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, who was at lunch. Connally said "the real sponsor of the bill sits in the gallery and directs the efforts of the Senator from New York, from the gallery."

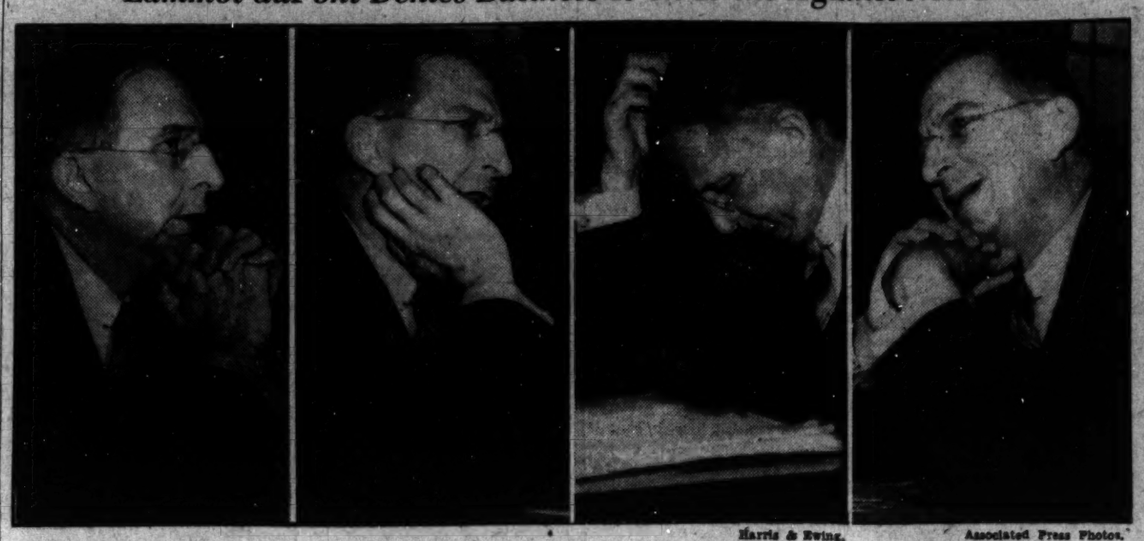
Lammot duPont Denies Business Is on Strike Against New Deal



Harris & Ewing. Associated Press Photos.

The "fog of uncertainty" should be dispelled, Lammot duPont, president of E. I. duPont de Nemours & Co., told the Senate Unemployment Committee yesterday. He is shown as he testified. The industrialist said his company expects a 23 per cent drop in sales in the first half of 1938, compared with the first six months of 1937, but hoped the forecast "proves erroneous." He urged that Government and business "take counsel together in a spirit of forbearance and co-operation." He denied a business "strike" against the Administration.

severely as tending to cause business to lose confidence.

Murray asked:

"You have always had a fear of the present Administration, have you not?"

"I have, personally," said duPont. Murray continued:

"Despite the tremendous upturn in your business in the last four years, and the fact the Administration was directly responsible for returning prosperity, you have always maintained, have you not, that its business and labor policies were detrimental?"

Fears for Future.

"There was some upturn," said duPont, "but I think there is reason to fear for the future."

DuPont prefaced his remarks, which were chiefly statistical, with the statement, "I have no theories to develop, or panaceas to lay before you." So closely did he hold to this position that at one point, when, in evident exasperation, Chairman James F. Byrnes, South Carolina, said, "Well, let me ask you a question about your own business;" duPont smiled with relief, saying: "I feel much better on that ground."

Byrnes snapped: "Since we can't get you to answer any questions on any other grounds, we'll proceed along that line."

The committee, at the end of the testimony of duPont, Dr. Claudius T. Murchison, president Cotton Textile Institute; Robert E. Henry, president, American Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and Russell T. Fisher, president, National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, released a special survey of general relief in selected urban areas of 100,000 population or more, for December, 1937.

The over-all figures, a total for 54 cities, disclosed the percentage of relief cases increased 15.9 in December over November, with new relief cases amounting to 376,786 during the month. Of the new cases, 51.7 per cent were employable persons.

The heaviest increases in relief rolls, it was noted, came in the most heavily industrialized cities, where the durable goods industries are located, such as Fort Wayne, Gary and South Bend, all in Indiana; Detroit and Grand Rapids, Mich.; Toledo and Canton, Ohio; Portland, Oreg.; Spokane, Wash., and Fort Worth, Tex.

The District of Columbia was one of only four cities showing declines, as relief locally fell 2.6 per cent.

Rise in Employment.

DuPont's employment figures for the company showed a steady post-depression rise in employment. With 42,000 men working in 1929—a total which declined to 28,000 in 1932—the company continued to hire more men consistently until September of last year, when employment reached a peak of 59,800. The abrupt recession separated 8,200 men from pay rolls in three months, a 14 per cent decline. The annual pay roll at the year end, he said, was 40 per cent higher, employment 23 per cent higher, average hourly wage rates 26 per cent higher, and number of hours worked 20 per cent less than in 1929. The pay roll for 1937 was 25 per cent larger than for 1936, he added.

Taxes Up 211 Per Cent

He further stated that while the company increased hourly wage rates 56 per cent since 1933, while material costs had jumped 75 per cent, and the taxes paid by the company had gone up 211 per cent in four years, the duPont price scale was now 29 per cent lower than in 1929 and "a shade" lower than in 1933.

That had been achieved, he said, by increased volume, "special attention to reduction of manufacturing cost," and the fact many duPont sales lines are relatively new, offering greater price-reduction opportunities.

The three cotton men presented a vast array of statistical data in an attempt to demonstrate accurately the position of cotton textiles in the national economy. Murchison stressed the industry's sympathy with the "fundamental objectives" of the NRA, and noted the industry voluntarily had continued to observe those principles in the operation of 85 per cent of its spindles.

He attacked processing taxes of the past before disclosing the May employment peak of 467,000 workers had dropped by November to 399,000, with further declines in December. Production is about 50 per cent of peak (May, 1937), he said. He insisted overbuying rather than overproduction, was a basic recession cause.

He asked repeal or substantial modification of the undistributed surplus profits tax and confinement of Government control of industry to only the most necessary regulatory powers.

Fisher and Henry both pleaded for drastic modification or repeal of the undistributed surplus profits tax.

Witnesses today will be headed by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who will appear at 10 a. m. John L. Lewis, chairman, Committee for Industrial Organization, scheduled to appear today, still is vacationing in Arizona.

Frankness Asked.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 10 (AP).—Roy A. Hunt, president of the Aluminum Company of America, asserted today the current business recession can be stemmed more quickly if both industry and Government will state exactly what they are going to do about it.

Hunt said the aluminum company has not curtailed its production of ingot, despite a 60 per cent decline in orders during the past three months, and will continue a $26,000,000 expansion program announced in April of 1936.

He added:

"When other prices were raising rapidly last spring, the aluminum company announced April 8 its policy would be to maintain its prices for the balance of the year," he added. "The company believes all users of aluminum and the public in general benefited by this policy. The price of aluminum ingot in 1926 was 27 and 28 cents per pound. In 1929, it was 24.3 cents per pound, while today the price is 20 cents per pound."

Transit Firm Gets Greenbelt Bus Bid

A joint board of regional representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission recommended yesterday to the commission that the Capital Transit Co. be authorized to operate as a common carrier between Washington and Greenbelt, Md.

Pending approval, the temporary route will be over Rhode Island avenue between Washington and Hyattsville; the Baltimore boulevard to Branchville road and then to Greenbelt.

Company officials stated that at least seven trips would be made by the buses daily from Greenbelt. During the morning hours, three buses would leave the model community at convenient times. The same number would return from Washington each day.

San Juan, P. R., Jan. 10 (U.P.).—Eight Puetro Rican nationalists tonight were sentenced to five years each in Atlanta Penitentiary after their conviction in Federal Court on a charge of attempted murder of United States District Judge Robert A. Cooper. The jury deliberated only 10 minutes.

Two other nationalists who pleaded guilty to a similar charge last Friday were sentenced to two years and six months each in Atlanta.

eral contribution, as recommended by the two special tax committees appointed by them.

He also threatened to fight the Budget Bureau's transfer of the $765,000 street light cost from the general fund to the highway fund if the change is incorporated in the District supply bill when reported to the House.

Nichols indicated he would be inclined to favor retention of the $1.75 realty tax rate as well as the gross receipts levy and he observed that the two taxes would raise sufficent revenue to meet the District deficit for the next fiscal year.

Suggests Tax Drive.

The sub-committee chairman suggested an aggressive drive to force local businessmen to pay the business privilege tax after Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen testified that receipts to date totaled only $942,500.

Allen added, however, that March collections from the tax probably will bring the total income to $2,200,000. Even that is far short of the $3,000,000 estimate of last year which is necessary to forestall a deficit this year.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal told the sub-committee that prosecutions of business and professional men who failed to file returns under the business privilege tax already had been instituted in court. Eleven complaints have been filed.

Hazen submitted figures to support his proposal that the 25-cent hike in the realty tax be allowed to lapse and that the $1.50 rate be resumed.

"While our rate is low in comparison with other cities," he said, "the rates themselves don't tell the whole story. Many cities assess property as low as 25 or 30 per cent of actual value, while the District must make assessments at full valuation."

Dirksen agreed and commented: "It seems to me that the high realty rate in other cities is just a subject for demagoguery. The important question is what proportion of the tax burden of the District is on real estate. My investigations have shown that real estate bears more than its fair share.

AN EASY WAY TO UNDERSTAND
WHAT IT TAKES TO MAKE ALUMINUM CHEAP

Making one pound of aluminum requires enough electricity to burn this 40-watt lamp for over 12 days and nights.
ALUMINUM
1 pound

YOUR WIFE WILL BE INTERESTED IN THIS FACT

Up to fifty years ago, aluminum was a precious metal. When Hall made his invention the commercial price was $8 a pound. But we knew aluminum would never amount to much until it was really cheap.

With the same kind of ore and essentially the same process, we are now able to produce raw aluminum to sell in bulk for 20 cents a pound. A lot of economies, big and little, have created that low price.

For instance, there is the matter of electricity.

Many expensive things must be done to get aluminum out of its ore. The final step calls for a lot of electricity. Enough electricity to supply an average home for 35 years is needed to make one ton.

To get enough cheap electricity to make aluminum cheap, we have invested millions in dams and powerhouses, often in remote sections of the country.

A lot of our money has gone into these plants, and into other big, efficient factories needed to make aluminum cheap. It is because others seemingly are unwilling to risk so heavy an investment that we are still the only company in this country making virgin aluminum.

It is because of these investments that we have been able to make raw aluminum so cheap that you see it everywhere.

Balkan States Watch as Austria and Hungary Weigh Bid.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Jan. 10—Austria and Hungary today stiffened their opposition to an Italian suggestion they join the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo anti-Communist pact.

Foreign ministers of three countries met privately in a conference that was expected to study the recently intensified conflict of Fascist and democratic influences in the Danubian Valley. Observers believed the meeting might determine the balance of power in southeastern Europe.

On the anticommunism pact, as well as several other points, Italy found the two smaller powers reluctant to follow Premier Mussolini's leadership.

Both Suspect Purpose.

Hungarians said unofficially that part of their objection to joining the Italian-German-Japanese accord lay in a suspicion it was directed not merely at communism but also—if indirectly—at democratic institutions.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, who accompanied Foreign Minister Guido Schmidt to the meetin, said "neither Austria nor Hungary has anything to fear from communism.

"Both have eliminated Communist dangers domestically and are not convinced of the necessity for a world association against the red menace."

Dozen Nations Watch.

But actually a dozen other states were watching closely for a hint of what might be Italy's aspirations in southeastern Europe. Several legations strengthened their staffs of "observers."

Hungary and Austria were represented as loath to affront the great democratic states of Europe. Both were said to be reluctant to follow the German and Italian example in leaving the League of Nations and recognizing the insurgent Spanish regime.

It was emphasized the Austrian and Hungarian resistance to Ciano's suggestions in no way approached a breach, although the two small powers were described as showing considerable independence of mind.

500 Resume Work In French Accord

Paris, Jan. 10 (AP).—Five hundred striking employes of the Goodrich Rubber Co. returned to work today, ending the conflict which has been the nucleus of the French government's labor problem.

Hundreds more workers awaited normal functioning of the factory to return to their jobs after accepting Premier Camille Chautemps' plan of arbitration.

A wave of strikes followed the Goodrich walkout December 15. Union officials said the rubber workers struck against application of the system of increased production devised by Charles E. Bedaux, United States industrial engineer. The arbitration provided for installing the system under government supervision.

Pinchot Will Enter Pennsylvania Race

Philadlphia, Jan. 10 (AP).—Gifford Pinchot, proclaiming himself ready at 72 for his political "fight of a lifetime," announced today for the Republican nomination for Governor of Pennsylvania.

Said Pinchot, twice elected Governor and three times defeated for the United States Senate: "I am in this race to the end."

He attacked the regime of Gov. George H. Earle, first Pennsylvania State Democratic administration in 44 years, as "wastefui, sloppy, grafting misrule."

Jew Council Fears Race Assimilation

Cincinnati, Jan. 10 (AP).—The fifth annual general assembly Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds came to a close tonight with a symposium in which belief was expressed that American Jewry is in danger of decimation.

"Already," said Rabbi Solomon Goldman, of Chicago, in a prepared address, "American Jewry is abandoning the force that works against assimilation—Jewish education. Already, our leadng laymen are either deserting the synagogue or relegating it to a place of minor importance."

Anvil's Spark Starts Fire on S. S. Leviathan

Hoboken, N. J., Jan. 10 (AP).—Fire broke out today on the S. S. Leviathan, one-time queen of the seas. The blaze, caused by a spark from a blacksmith's anvil, firemen said, began in a pile of canvas on an upper deck and was extinguished with little damage. The former German liner, seized by the United States during the war, has been sold for scrap.

Yeggs Work 24 Hours To Rob Postal Station

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP).—Persistent burglars, who police today estimated worked at least 24 hours, sawed, chopped, chiseled and hacked through cement and steel to rob the Washington Heights postal substation of $6,000 over the week-end. The robbers entered the building by cutting through a 14-inch wall. Then they applied pickaxes to a 12-inch cement and steel wall of the vault.

mechanic in the St. Paul shops of Northwest Airlines.

Cause of the tragedy was unknown, but a windstorm had been raging over the Bridger Mountains most of the afternoon.

Line's First Fatal Accident.

It was the first fatal accident for the Northwest Airlines, which had a record of 11 years of operations without the loss of a passenger.

The big plane was due at Billings, Mont., its next stop, at 3:55 p. m.

At Spokane, Ernest Code, Northwest Airlines district traffic manager, reported the last radio message picked up there from the plane was at 2:05 p. m.

It said: "Cruising at 9,000 feet with everything O. K."

The position was not given at that time.

The plane crashed at approximately 6 p. m.

Pilot Mamer was Spokane's best-known flier and was known to fliers of the Pacific Northwest as the "father" of the northern transcontinental route on which he crashed.

He made the first round-trip St. Paul-Seattle flight, in 1930, and for several months operated a commercial line between Spokane and St. Paul before the days of beacons, radio beams and postal service. Flying associates credited him with convincing the United States Postoffice Department of the route's feasibility.

In Air 10,000 Hours.

Mamer had been in the air more than 10,000 hours in 20 years of flying, and his proudest boast was that he never had injured a passenger. His earlier flying was as a "free lance." Among his outstanding achievements were an early coast-to-coast nonstop refueling flight and victory in a New York-to-Spokane air race in 1928.

Mamer passed his million-mile flying mark in the summer of 1936.

The ranchers who were working near the scene of the crash said one body was thrown clear of the wreckage but landed so close to the flaming fuselage they could not reach it.

They said this person, apparently a man, appeared either unconscious or dead.

The ranchers hurried to the highway to get aid and there met Sheriff Lovitt I. Westlake and forest rangers en route to the isolated scene. The snowshoe and ski-equipped rescue party continued toward the plane.

Weather Was Clear.

Mountains in the area are from 8,000 to 10,000 feet high, and from 3,000 to 5,000 feet above the floor of the Gallatin Valley, which is followed by planes.

Though a windstorm had been raging in the mountains through the afternoon, weather was fairly clear at the time of the crash. A fog settled later.

The crash scene is near the Flaming Arrow Dude Ranch, located at the top of the Continental Divide between the Missouri River and Yellowstone River drainage basins. The area is about 90 miles north of Yellowstone National Park and slightly off the radio beam.

An airplane from Butte flew to the crash scene but was unable to land because of weather conditions and the rugged terrain.

Argentine Victims Found.

Buenos Aires, Jan. 10 (AP).—The bodies of Eduardo Justo, son of President Agustin J. Justo of Argentina, and eight others aboard an Argentine army plane which crashed yesterday in a remote section of northwestern Uruguay were found today.

Eduardo was 28 and a civilian pilot. Other victims were Lieut. Col. Jose Bergamini, chief pilot; Maj. Victor Vergani, co-pilot; Col. Abraham Sweizer, chief military aide to the President; Lieut. Col Firmo Posadas, aide de camp to the President; Naval Lieut. Juan Oreshnick, aide to the marine minister; Lieut. Col. Antonio Berardo, commander of the first artillery regiment; Sergt. Juan Leon Rosa, radio operator, and Sergt. Carlos Leveratto, mechanic.

Loyalists Take Hill, Securing Teruel Front

By the United Press.

Teruel, Spain, Via Barcelona, Jan. 10.—Government troops tonight stormed and captured La Muela Hill, dominating Teruel.

The hill, rising behind a plateau a mile and a half northwest of Teruel, fell to Gen. Vicente Rojo's troops after heavy artillery bombardment.

Until "the tooth of Teruel" was taken the government's hold on the city was insecure and rebel guns atop the peak might at any time start a destructive bombardment of the city below.

Nor could the loyalists protect their lines of communications or prevent Generalissimo Franco's forces from sweeping down the highway from Zaragoza at the north so long as the hill remained in enemy hands. It dominates four important roads—to Concud on the north, Bezas on the west, La Puebla to the southeast, and Villel to the south.

Twenty-five loyalist artillery batteries fired 1,400 shells into the half-mile-square area of the fortified peak in 45 minutes before the government infantry attacked, led by Asturian miners who tossed bombs into rebel trenches circling the hill.

Forty fast pursuit planes swept over the mountain and drew off a fleet of 14 rebel bombers which were ready to bomb the loyalists scrambling up the mountainside.

Treasury to Buy 35 Million Ounces Of Mexican Silver

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau announced yesterday the Treasury had agreed to buy 35,000,000 ounces of silver from Mexico in addition to monthly purchases of approximately 5,000,000 ounces.

The Treasury agreed to pay 45 cents an ounce for the 35,000,000 ounces, which Secretary Morgenthau said were an accumulation which Mexico could have dumped on the world market, possibly demoralizing prices.

The Secretary said that, in accordance with understandings for 1938 reached with Canada and Mexico, the Treasury had agreed to by durin- January 2,000,000 ounces of silver from Canada and 5,000,000 ounces from Mexico. These amounts were approximately the same as average monthly purchases from these countries last year.

Nearly Billion in Relief Is Authorized, Unspent

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt advised Congress yesterday $983,925,505 of old authorizations for relief and public works funds are still available for spending.

This is the unobligated balance of $15,291,913,017 that has been made available since 1932. Nearly half of what is left has been allocated to the Works Progress Administration for the next six months, and the President has the other half yet to allocate—probably also to WPA. These figures do not, however, represent money on hand—they are merely authorizations to spend.

Tsingtao Falls To Tokyo Navy Without a Shot

Marines Enter Mill City, Accept Control From Foreign Vigilantes.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Jan. 11.—A renewed Japanese push toward Suchow, strategic rail junction north of Nanking, appeared imminent today following the bloodless occupation of Tsingtao, principal port of rich Shantung Province.

Without firing a shot, Japanesse naval forces occupied Tsingtao yesterday, ten days after the city's defenders had fled leaving acres of dynamited, burned and looted Japanese buildings. Destruction of Japanese properties was estimated at $100,000,000.

Four hundred marines entered the city after an 18-mile march from Shatzekow. Shortly after they arrived, troop ships entered the harbor and began disembarking additional marines.

Japanese patrols immediately lowered white flags, which had been hoisted before their entry, and raised in their places the rising sun banners of Japan.

As soon as the occupation was completed, Americans and other foreigners, who had gathered at the Edgewater Hotel outside the anticipated danger zone, returned to their homes.

Britain to Accede in Shanghai.

London, Jan. 10 (AP).—Great Britain notified the United States and France today it would oppose all Japanese demands for permanent changes in the administration of Shanghai's International Settlement.

Authoritative sources, however, asserted Britain was prepared to accede to some of the Japanese demands for an increased share in the government of the Shanghai foreign community.

Government quarters did not disclose the terms on which Great Britain was willing to compromise with Japan, but it was indicated they included increased Japanese personnel on the settlement's police force.

Shoreham Co. Wins False Arrest Case

A jury in District Court yesterday absolved the Shoreham Investment Co. of having falsely caused arrest of Mary L. Burke, who was placed in custody in March, 1936, by detectives summoned to the building.

In a trial held before Justice James M. Proctor it was brought out there had been numerous acts of petty thievery in the building and the woman had gone there to seek a job. While sitting outside the employment office she was arrested by Metropolitan policemen.

Through attorneys Neil Burkinshaw and Daniel Maher, the company contended it was in no way responsible for the affair. The woman was not charged with any offense and was soon released.

Governor of S. Dakota Seeks G.O.P. Senate Job

Pierre, S. Dak., Jan. 10 (AP).—Gov. Leslie Jensen today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States Senator at the May primary election. If nominated he would contest for the seat now held by Senator Herbert E. Hitchcock (Democrat), appointed by Gov. Tom Berry a year ago to finish the unexpired term of the late Senator Peter Norbeck (Republican).

A Victory For Peace.

Put to the test, the House by a small majority decided against any discussion of the Ludlow war referendum resolution. Had actual adoption of this ill-judged measure been an issue, the adverse vote would undoubtedly have been much larger. The refusal even to consider so dangerous a proposal is an encouraging symptom of awakening realism in this country on the problem of how to remain at peace.

The Ludlow measure had languished in the Judiciary Committee for 18 months. But during the special session, and particularly at the time of the Panay incident, the 218 signatures necessary for a discharge petition were finally secured. It is very significant that this was 30 more than proponents of the measure were able to muster yesterday.

Reflection brought realization that a war referendum, instead of being helpful in keeping the United States out of war, would, as the President suggested in his letter to Speaker Bankhead, "have the opposite effect." The plan is not merely incompatible with "our representative form of government" as the President says. It would also cripple any Chief Executive in his conduct of foreign relations and would "encourage other nations to believe that they could violate American rights with impunity."

Peace can never be made secure if so great and powerful a nation as the United States persistently serves notice that aggression on the part of militaristic governments is a matter of complete indifference to us. Peace will be organized on a permanent basis only when the United States comes to realize that this condition is indivisible, and that large-scale warfare anywhere is a continuous threat to the security and prosperity of our own people.

It is, therefore, a healthy sign that over 1,000 prominent individuals, banded together in the Committee for Concerted Peace Efforts, yesterday presented to Congress a manifesto declaring that "the drift toward catastrophe can only be stopped if the peace-loving nations will act together to uphold the sanctity of international obligations." And it may be supposed that the vote on the Ludlow resolution was influenced by their further conclusion that: "There is no other alternative. If we do not act together now, we may soon find ourselves in a situation in which the forces of lawlessness have become so strong that it will be too late for co-operative action to maintain peace."

Now that the Ludlow resolution has been thrust into limbo a more constructive effort, for peace measures more worthy of that name, may be anticipated.

Jules Henry Leaves Us.

The appointment of a new French Ambassador to fill the vacancy left by Georges Bonnet last summer is welcome here. But the development is overcast by making it coincident with the recall of Jules Henry, the very popular and able counselor of embassy who has served his government in Washington continuously since 1919.

Those who know M. Henry—and there are many in unofficial as well as official circles who claim that honor—will be truly regretful when the time comes for departure of one who first came to the Capital when Jusserand was Ambassador and Lansing Secretary of State. A young third secretary at that time, M. Henry has steadily broadened his background and advanced in authority until he is now, as counselor and charge d'affaires, easily one of the most outstanding members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Many had hoped that M. Henry would be the new Ambassador here, a post for which his training and abilities fit him admirably. But such a break with bureaucratic routine was evidently too drastic for the French Foreign Office to approve. So he will return to Paris for a turn of home duty after inducting Count St. Quentin, formerly Ambassador-designate to Italy, into the mysteries of Washington life.

The Count will be fortunate in having so skillful a cicerone during the difficult initial stages of his sojourn. There is no doubt that he will be as welcome as any of his distinguished predecessors who have served here as spokesmen of France. But the shift none the less emphasizes that waste which rules of precedence involve when they remove a man who is so informed a student of America as M. Henry, at just that time when his years of specialized experience are bearing very constructive fruit.

As Yet More Heat Than Light.

Much heated discussion has so far failed to open any promising road toward solution of the monopoly problem. President Roosevelt has passed over several good opportunities to inform the public of any definite plans he may have. That fact, together with the wide divergence of views expressed by other Government officials, raises a strong presumption that no clear policy on the subject has been formulated.

The President has voiced intention to "eradicate the evils that flow from undue concentration of economic power or unfair business practices." And there is no question as to the desirability of this objective. Controversy and confusion on the subject spring entirely from the complete uncertainty as to methods contemplated.

Uncontrolled monopoly has few defenders. But something more than talk is needed to curb it. The question now at issue is whether the Administration will rest content with a mere witch-hunting expedition or whether it will drop politics to undertake a scientific study of the subject with the object of enacting constructive legislation at some future date.

It is not reasonable to suppose that the Administration will rely upon the present law to cure the abuses of which it complains. Assistant Attorney General Jackson, who is in charge of antitrust law enforcement, contends that these laws "as at present constituted are not an effective instrument in preventing centralization of economic control and rigid price structures." Moreover, he pointed out in his annual report that "It is impossible . . . with the present personnel to prosecute successfully the potential antitrust cases which come before the department."

Since only a meager increase has been included in the budget for the Antitrust Division, inadequate enforcement of the law seems to be contemplated for another year. Apparently, then, the correction of monopolistic abuses sought by the President will be contingent upon alteration of existing statutes.

There is no lack of suggestions as to procedure. Donald Richberg, former head of the NRA, urges a new experiment in cooperation among business men under Government guidance. President Roosevelt's comments at a recent press conference indicated that he approves this general approach. But other close students of the subject believe that a better solution can be found in the preservation of industrial and business competition.

On the other hand, there are those who believe that choice of method should wait on better information. Dr. Raymond Leslie Buell, research director of the Economic Policy Committee, pointed out in The Post yesterday that "we do not know what type of control can best transfer to the public the benefits of large-scale production." Until the extent of monopolistic control is revealed, and the whole question of the proper relationship between Government and business explored by experts, it would be folly to expect the enactment of an adequate and intelligent antitrust measure.

Dr. Buell mentioned the National Monetary Commission of 1907 and similar bodies as illustrations of the type of investigating agency that is needed. Obviously it should be completely authoritative and should be given a free hand to study industrial concentration in all of its numerous phases and ramifications. On the basis of such an inquiry the anti-monopoly drive could readily be diverted from partisan purposes to the public good.

To press for quick action without such an inquiry might easily, as Dr. Buell suggests, lead to disaster. Attorney General Cummings has clearly pointed out the need for looking before leaping in such a complicated undertaking. It is time for the Administration to substitute the light of judicial inquiry for the heat of controversy and confusion in this issue.

Time To Change The Rule.

The Senate will doubtless investigate the qualifications of Justice Sutherland's successor with a great deal of care. Regardless of whom the nominee may be, Senators will not be disposed to act without information. Their experience in hastily confirming the appointment of Justice Black, and afterward discovering that he had concealed his former membership in the Ku Klux Klan, was a lesson not likely soon to be forgotten.

Such an important responsibility as inquiring into the fitness of Supreme Court appointees, however, should not hinge upon a consciousness of error on the part of Senators now serving. As Senator Bridges has pointed out, the routine procedure in such cases should be prescribed by the Senate rules. Surely it should be expected that every nominee to the Supreme Bench stand the test of a public hearing.

The time for adoption of such a rule will never be more appropriate than at present. The "senatorial courtesy" tradition was partly upset by the substantial number of votes cast against confirmation of Mr. Black, in spite of the Judiciary Committee's failure to examine his qualifications. To complete the destruction of that custom now could not possibly be considered prejudicial to any one. On the other hand, a decision to scrutinize the qualifications of all future nominees would relieve the Senate of the possible embarrassment of having to modify its practice after an appointment has been made.

Because of the unfortunate circumstances surrounding the last appointment to the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt may this time select a purist already on the bench. But that possibility in no way weakens the desirability of Senatorial hearings on all important judicial nominations as a routine procedure.

It goes without saying that such inquiries should seek only pertinent information, without resort to partisanship or prejudice of any kind. But the most undesirable aspects of full inquiry are inconsequential compared to the dangers of maintaining Senatorial courtesy as the standing rule.

Encroachment At Shanghai.

Tensions in Shanghai between the Japanese invaders and the resident foreign community are becoming steadily more dangerous. In effect, the Japanese are now demanding that they be permitted to exercise unrestrained sovereignty not only in the purely Chinese sections of this great seaport, but in the International Settlement and the French Concession as well.

A Japanese spokesman has, to be sure, agreed "in principle" to the unquestionable right of the French and International Settlement authorities to keep belligerent troops out of their respective defense zones. But, he adds, "present conditions in Shanghai make it impractical to regard boundaries here as strictly as those between two countries."

The world knows only too well the meaning of an agreement "in principle" on the part of Japan. That nation still agrees "in principle" to the stipulations of the Nine-Power Treaty regarding the maintenance of China's territorial and administrative integrity. Japan is "in principle" committed to the doctrine of the Open Door. Now, again "in principle," the Japanese accept the special treaty rights enjoyed by other foreign powers in Shanghai. Acceptance "in principle" is, by the Japanese code, the first step toward violation in practice.

As far back as November 11, Gen. Matsui, the Japanese army commander, declared in an interview that as the conqueror of Shanghai he felt entirely free to take "any steps" he deemed desirable, treaties or no. And since then one after another of the administrative functions in the international area have been taken over by the invaders.

First came the seizure of the customs, so that Japanese imports may now be landed in China duty free and without identification. This was followed by censorship of cables and radio, so that now only material approved by the Japanese military can be sent in news reports from Shanghai. Today the aggressors are evidently preparing to occupy and police an area which has long been under international, including American, administrative control.

The cumulative significance of these steps is great, and gives ground for very real anxiety. Every time the foreign powers have yielded an inch to Japan in supporting their treaty rights, she has taken a yard. Unless this process is soon firmly resisted the destruction of all those rights at Shanghai will be complete.

A very good case could be made out for the ultimate transfer to China of the authority now legally exercised by foreigners in the International Settlement and the French Concession. There is no case whatsoever for the surrender of a single one of those rights to Japan.

Two Child Labor Amendments.

In a recent poll of its members the American Bar Association went on record in favor of the proposed Vandenberg amendment to the Constitution under which Congress would be authorized to limit or prohibit the hiring of children under 18 years of age. For several reasons this poll has a significant bearing upon the unwillingness of the Roosevelt Administration to rely upon the amendment process when the Constitution appears to stand in the way of favored reforms.

No amendment to the Constitution has been submitted to the people by the present Administration. The President thinks that procedure is too slow and uncertain. Failure of the proposed child labor amendment of 1924 is usually cited in support of this attitude. But the recent poll puts quite a different face on the matter.

No doubt the Bar Association was an important factor in defeating the resolution of 1924. Since lawyers are prominent in the State Legislatures, the association was in a strategic position to make its influence felt. Its members are still opposed to the 1924 resolution by a vote of about 4 to 1. But, as the recent poll showed, that does not mean they disapprove prohibition of child labor, through a constitutional amendment.

By a substantial majority the lawyers replying to the questionnaire believe that Congress should have power to prevent the exploitation of children. But they expressed preference for the Vandenberg amendment over the 1924 resolution by a vote of more than 6 to 1.

Under the 1924 resolution Congress would have been given power to regulate as well as to limit and prohibit the employment of persons under 18 years of age. Many States are not willing to grant Congress such sweeping powers over the lives of their children. In very large measure that explains the failure of the proposed amendment, but it certainly does not follow that a properly safeguarded measure would be rejected.

It is a pity that Congress has not approved and submitted to the States the Vandenberg amendment. Prompt action now might result in ratification of the resolution within a year. In any event, such an effort would bring a much-needed clearing of the atmosphere with regard to the feasibility of achieving such reforms through constitutional amendments.

To Eradicate Ragweed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have recently returned from Edgartown, Mass. While there I was greatly impressed with the work done to make the community safe for hay fever sufferers. The island has eliminated ragweed!

They started a campaign against this menacing weed and set aside Ragweed Campaign Day. Fifty-two men were engaged and 27 tons of the noxious weed were pulled up and destroyed before it could shed its pollen. Trucks and wagons were donated by the populace and the ragweed carried away. This is a blessed service for Edgartown, through its women citizens of the Garden Club, with the cooperation of the editors of the Vineyard Gazette, to have rendered to its hay fever victims.

It is my firm conviction that if the victims of hay fever would band themselves together into a club in the various cities and towns throughout the country the United States could free itself of this annual horror for those who suffer from it. Here, too, is a humanitarian opportunity not only to help ourselves but to give jobs to thousands of unemployed.

Southern Freight Rates.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Southern Governors are now in Washington for a conference with the President to beg for railroad freight equalization.

If it happens that they fall down in that conference, which heaven forefend, and the billion dollar roads which seem not be classed as "big business," get their raise in rates, it will call to mind the old-time Republicans who always revised protective tariffs upward; who when asked for bread gave the Democrats a stone.

It's been a long lane for the South, but, in my opinion, this half-century freight discrimination was never inspired by sectionalism, but by an underestimate of the South's potentialities.

Methodist's Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Publicity is being given to the fact that the trustees of the St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal Church South have "vigorously opposed the plan to open the old tuberculosis hospital for convalescent patients from Gallinger Hospital, claiming it would adversely affect property values."

As a Methodist, I should like to be informed when in the history of Methodism property values replaced humanitarian values?

Anti-Lynchers' Aim.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Westbrook Pegler misses the whole philosophy and wisdom of the fight to eradicate lynching when he measures it in the number of victims' lives to be saved.

The object of the fight is not simply to save the victim but the perpetrators of the crime of lynch savagery and, above all, to save the whole of society from such an anti-social and brutalizing handicap. The number of lynch victims has small relevancy to the problem.

Suppose, for example, that the lynchers should agree to hold only one lynching a year, with the added proviso that the victim must always be one who has been found guilty and was bound to death anyway—those fighting for anti-lynching legislation would still have ample ground for insisting that even one such exhibition of savagery against even one doomed person be forbidden under penalty of law.

The big objective is to save American society, its law and order and civilization—and, by all means, to save the great white race, which is the victimized perpetrator of all the lynchings, from degradation and degeneracy.

Domestic Workers' Privileges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We've been hearing much about being kind to underprivileged industrial workers. I wonder why they never care about helping us who work in private homes, for we need help a great deal more than industrial workers. I wonder why they hear criticism of the wicked industrialists who make employes work more than six hours a day, with no vacation, at less than good wages, and not being able to dictate entirely their own working conditions, etc., and yet keep silent about us who work twice as many hours each day, and every day in the week, most of us at small pay, with nothing at all to say about our working conditions.

If charity begins at home, why don't all these lovers of social justice take care of their own employes before going outside and telling other people how to treat theirs?

M Street Market.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sale of the old M Street Market Building should be of particular interest to every citizen in Georgetown.

I have been informed that the property was deeded to the District authorities, for use as a market, with the restriction if abandoned it would revert to the heirs of the original owners.

Nearly every section in the District of Columbia has a market, where farmers and provision dealers are privileged to offer their products for sale. Why should we be deprived of this convenience? I was a patron of this market and my parents were before me.

The Georgetown Citizens' Association has on several occasions solicited the co-operation of the District authorities to again open up the market for the accommodation of the public, but the proposition still lies dormant.

Militarize The CCC?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Majower, writing in the letter columns of The Post, asks for militarization of the CCC.

Militarization of the CCC has long been the aim of the propaganda units of the German-American Bund and representatives of Italian Fascism in America. It would eliminate the possibility of maintaining democratic ideas among the unemployed youth; it would give official and moral support to militarization of State and Federal departments; better than this, it would insure the Government of an effective propaganda agency that would control the youth at a most impressionistic age.

Actually, propaganda in the camps would control two sources of public opinion—the parent and the child. Since CCC wages are largely used to supplement (or replace) home wages, the parents, partly or wholly dependent on this source of income, would naturally approve measures considered necessary to the welfare of their sons and daughters.

The CCC should be left alone. The fellows are doing good and important work for conservation. Militarization of the CCC would mean that time spent in socially valuable work would be wasted on learning the inside of a machine-gun or how to decipher an officer's trimmings.

Postoffice Deficits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much hue and cry has been made by certain Government officials about the "enormous" deficit in the Postoffice Department due to carrying newspapers and magazines at too low a rate—a rate below the actual cost of transportation and delivery charges made by the Postoffice Department for such services. The charge should be, so say these officials, not less than actual cost; in fact the service should show a profit to help pay the cost of operating the general Government. That might be ideal, were there not objectives of still greater importance in the service rendered by the Postoffice Department but lost sight of by efficiency experts and some politicians.

That nation is the strongest which is closest knit internally. Such integration can only be achieved by a healthy, sympathetic, and intelligent understanding of the country's diverse and difficult problems by all the people.

As I see it, the Postoffice facilities are the first line of defense and offense against enemies without and within the borders of the Nation. Had I the authority to make the rate to be charged for such services, I should cut the rate to half of what it now is to publishers, and to the consumer who might wish to send a copy of a magazine or paper to someone else after he or she had finished with it.

Two War Referendum Viewpoints.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Tydings of Maryland is reported in the press as having castigated the Ludlow war referendum in his address before a Town Meeting audience.

He is quoted as objecting to the proposal because "he insists upon his right as a member of Congress to vote for or against a declaration of war." Now, it would just be too bad were the Senator to be deprived of the privilege of sending young men to the shambles without their consent.

The amendment would not take from any national legislator the right to signify his indorsement of a purely and genuinely defensive war. That being the case, it seems that the opposition Congressmen are worried over the probability that their hitherto privilege of officially embroiling us in the selfish quarrels of foreigners may be at an end.

Being an exponent of democracy, Mr. Tydings ought not to be unwilling to accord to his constituency a privilege which he enjoys in such a momentous matter as the involvement of the United States in conflict on foreign soil. To let the people directly express their views is the purest sort of democracy. Let us have the amendment and abide by the result.

E. P. McDEVITT.
Bethesda, Md., Jan. 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the student of social forces, the Ludlow resolution to enter into war by referendum is the most important topic for general discussion.

If we would destroy representative democracy and give full force to the bitter resentments of various elements of our people before they have been adequately educated to meet their own problems, then by all means turn loose the possibility to provoke war by mass opinion. Certainly Italy and Japan have demonstrated how "depression psychosis" affects peoples.

Surely the President left no doubt in his message that our own Nation is not yet freed of sectional prejudices, and we know the rural-urban hostility to be a political problem in many States. Since democratic success is primarily subjective rather than objective, and self-government is the measure of our advancement, would it not be suicidal to ask the people to say by vote that the Nation should not go to war for any cause except invasion of our own territory?

For these contingencies our Constitution provides the safest mode of procedure, with a President and Legislature chosen by the people, and a press free and supplemented by the wide diffusion of the radio open to discussions over the whole land.

The Post Impressionist

First Date

WE FELT very grown up the year we went into the seventh grade. It was our final year in grammar school, and we felt that we were young men and women.

Most of us had been together all the way through the grammar grades, but when we went into the classroom to start the final term there was a stranger there.

The stranger was a pretty little girl, with dark bobbed hair, and blue eyes, and she smiled at us as we came into the room.

I thought that she was the prettiest girl I had ever seen and I was glad to find that her desk was close to mine.

I spent most of that day watching her and after school I walked home with her.

She told me that her name was Virginia Sullivan and that her family had just moved to Atlanta and that she was sure she was going to like it there.

I liked the way she talked and the way she smiled, and I told her that I liked Atlanta better now that she was there.

The next day Joe McDonough and Dave Smith teased me about walking home with a girl, but I didn't pay any attention to them. After that I walked home with Virginia every day.

I thought of her all the time I was away from her and toward the end of the year I thought that I was old enough to have a date.

One night I told my family that I was grown up now and I would like to take Virginia to a show.

They laughed at first, but finally I convinced them that I was serious, and they agreed.

"It's all right with me," my father said, "but it might not be all right with Mr. Sullivan."

But I called Mr. Sullivan and he agreed, too, and a little later I arrived at Virginia's house and found her waiting.

She was wearing a soft, white dress, and there was a white ribbon in her dark hair. Her blue eyes were shining with the excitement of her first date. I thought that there had never been anyone so breath-takingly beautiful.

There was nothing romantic about the trip downtown because we went by street car and the car was crowded. But it was different in the theater.

The show was called "When Knighthood Was in Flower," and it portrayed the very things we felt. There was danger and beauty and romance and gallantry on the screen and Virginia and I sat close together in the dark and lived each scene. Toward the last we were holding hands.

I was sorry when the show was over. The lights went up and the spell was gone and we were young again and tomorrow we would be in school.

We left the theater and went outside and stood on a corner waiting for the car that would take us home.

There was a drugstore on the corner and I wanted to buy Virginia some ice cream or a soda. But I only had a dime besides the carfare, so we had ice cream cones instead.

We stood there eating the cones and after a while the street car came and we got on and finished the cones while we were riding home.

I stayed longer than I should have at Virginia's house, telling her goodnight, and when I got home my father told me that I should have been home long ago.

But it really didn't matter, because I didn't sleep anyway after I got in bed.

It was a warm May night and there was a bright moon and moonlight streamed into the windows of my room. I stayed awake for hours thinking about Virginia and about how she had looked in the moonlight.

I was still thinking of her the next morning when I left for school.

It was early when I left the house, and I stopped along the way and gathered up some flowers that grew along the edges of a park. I wanted Virginia to have them because I wanted her to know how much our date had meant to me.

She was standing in the schoolyard, talking to some friends, when I got there.

I didn't wait until she was alone, but went up to her and handed her the flowers.

"These are for you," I said. "I hope you like them."

The others laughed, but Virginia didn't say anything. She just stood there looking at the flowers and her face turned very red.

Finally she threw the flowers down and turned and ran.

"I hate you," she called over her shoulder. "Don't ever speak to me again."

She was crying when we got into the classroom. She wouldn't speak to me all day.

I didn't know what I had done. I was hurt and puzzled and that night I asked my father what had happened.

I told him the whole story, about the flowers and all, and asked him if he could explain why Virginia had acted the way she did.

But he just smiled and put his arm around my shoulder.

"I wouldn't worry about it, son," he said. "Women are strange creatures. When you grow up you'll learn more about them."

But he was wrong.

Men Bite Subsidy.

I HAVE a special interest in the dispute over the so-called postoffice subsidy to the press, particularly the newspaper section of the press as distinguished from the magazines, because this complaint was what Jim Farley had in mind that time he said if he had a message for the public he preferred the air to print. I gave him an argument, and it turned out that Jim wanted some publicity for a deficiency between the amount which the papers pay for their second-class postal service and the amount which he claims that service costs.

PEGLER.

This was no compliment to the mob of Government press agents who have burrowed into the hide of the body politic in Washington, but it was no medal of honor for the press, either.

Anyway, the piece has been in print three ways since then. It broke in the annual report of the Postoffice Department and was given a good ride; then Mr. Roosevelt talked it up in the press conferences, which made it practically "must" copy, and now it is in again in the form of an answer from the postal committee of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

• • • •

THAT ANSWER has its merits, but not enough of them, because there is one point where it says that the papers can be transported and distributed by private agencies more cheaply than by the Postoffice Department. Knowing that publishers are not philanthropists by nature, I have to wonder why they don't quit using the mails and go over to the private agencies if that is so, and there is enough discrepancy left between Farley's report and the publishers' reply to call for another review of the whole case.

Certainly somebody is either misrepresenting things or using expense account arithmetic, and it will be in the papers' own interests to clear up the matter. Otherwise, Mr. Roosevelt, Jim and Harold Ickes, who are always needling the press, will be able to toss off cracks about the newspapers' postal graft according to the Administration's own figures and break the force of any honest criticism of the Government.

No President in our time has been as hostile to the press as Mr. Roosevelt, although, curiously, no Presidential family in our time except that of Warren Harding, who was a publisher, made as much money out of journalism while in office. It is true that Coolidge got a dollar a word for his stuff, but that was after he left the White House, whereas journalistic genius flashed in the writing Roosevelts the instant the returns were in in 1932 as suddenly as it hit Jess Willard when he knocked out Johnson and Dempsey when he knocked out Jess.

Louie Howe was around like a literary pack peddler as soon as Hoover admitted defeat, with essays for sale on this and that, and a smart agent with a little sporting blood in his veins might do worse right now than buy up cheap options on the literary output of the familes of all those possible nominees in 1940 who are now quoted at long odds in the future book.

• • • •

JIM FARLEY'S accountants and service experts claim that a newspaper riding the mail as second-class matter at a very low price receives the same care and speed of delivery as a first-class letter under a 3-cent stamp. Newspaper men who know the circulation business claim that this just isn't so. That should be easy to setle, and no amount of otherhanding and whoevering can justify the continuance of any rates which give the papers a free ride or a cut rate at the taxpayers' expense.

There is just no argument about the fact that some small country papers do ride absolutely free in their own respective counties, and even though this is only a small item in the total deficiency which Jim charges to the handling of papers, nothing can be said to justify it.

The ony attempt at justification is the sentimental plea that a lot of little country operators getting along with a hatful of type and a kickpress can't afford to pay postage, but by the same reasoning the little country grocer should be allowed to deliver his cornmeal and canned goods free through the mail.

One curious thing occurs in this controversy which seems to upset the old Upton Sinclair superstition that a kept or subsidized press is servile to its sugar daddy. Because if the American press does enjoy a subsidy it has not only bitten the hand which feeds it, but munched it off clear up to the shoulder.

Social Credit Tests

Ottawa Government, Together With Banks And Newspapers, Challenge Aberhart Legislature's Bills In Court.

By Our Ottawa Correspondent.

Ottawa.

YESTERDAY the Supreme Court of Canada at Ottawa began the hearings in the judicial references submitted to it about certain Alberta legislation passed last year by the provincial legislature at the instance of the Social Credit ministry. The legal battle which will ensue will be followed with keen interest as its results may have important effects upon the King government's plans for constitutional and financial reform.

The federal government seeks a declaration of the court that three measures dealing with taxation of banks, the regulation of credit and control of the press in Alberta are unconstitutional. Assent to these three bills has been reserved by the lieutenant governor of Alberta and the federal government desires rulings of the court which will sustain the lieutenant governor's powers of reservation and the federal power of disallowance of provincial statutes, both of which have been challenged by Alberta.

Banking interests are also in the arena, attacking Alberta's bank taxation and credit regulation bills, and two newspaper organizations have intervened to seek a declaration that the press bill is unconstitutional.

Government Challenging Entire Social Credit Plan.

THE GOVERNMENT is making a frontal attack upon the whole plan of Social Credit as an illegal invasion of the jurisdiction of the federal Parliament. It reviews earlier Alberta legislation dealing with Social Credit and the pronouncements of Social Credit leaders and claims to find in these convincing proof that the three bills, which are challenged, are "part and parcel of one legislative scheme sharing a common aim, that of acquiring control over the policy of institutions, which alone possess in the view of the Social Credit government the power to 'monetize the credit of the people of Alberta.'"

Its memorial to the court continues that this aim involves "encroachments upon the exclusive legislative authority of the Dominion Parliament in relation to banking, the incorporation of banks, the issue of paper money and the regulation of trade and commerce."

Anticipating this argument, the Alberta government submits that the general purposes of its policy are quite irrelevant to the specific issues before the court; that there is no authority under which such material could be regarded as relevant, and that even if extraneous material could ever be relevant to the references, a comprehensive inquiry would be necessary to determine its significance because no safe conclusion could be drawn from material selected by those who were calling in question the validity of the three bills.

"The validity of a provincial statute," says the Alberta factum, "does not depend upon its purpose . . . The legislative powers conferred remain fixed; their legal limits cannot vary with the circumstances of their exercise." So it is insisted that the court must confine its attention to the actual bills before it.

In regard to the lieutenant-governor powers of reservation and the federal right of disallowance, Alberta claims that both these powers have disappeared as the result of the new constitutional conventions emanating from the passage of the statute of Westminster, which have affected the powers of the British government to disallow Dominion legislation and of the governor-general to reserve assent to measures of the federal Parliament.

In answer to this argument the federal government claims that the British North America act has never been amended in respect to these particular powers; that the only right of amendment rests with the British Parliament, and that statutory powers, expressly provided for, can never lapse through disuse.

Alberta Is Depending On North America Act.

FOR DEFENDING its banking and credit legislation the Alberta government relies upon the powers conferred upon the provinces by the British North America act in regard to property and civil rights and the imposition of direct taxation.

The same ground is taken by Alberta as justification for its press bill, but the federal government claims that it infringes upon its jurisdiction over criminal law, peace, order and good government and communications between the provinces, the newspaper association of Alberta makes the additional argument that it impinges upon fundamental rights of Canadian citizenship.

The press bill requires the newspapers of Alberta to publish amplifying or corrective statements about governmental policies at the request of the chairman of the Social Credit Board and upon similar demand to disclose the names of the writers of news items, editorials and articles and their sources of information. Heavy penalties, including a suspension of publication, are provided for infractions of this law.

The newspapers contend that freedom of the press as a fundamental right must be uniform throughout the Dominion and any regulation of it must be a matter for federal jurisdiction. Otherwise, it is argued, the citizenship of a person living in one part of Canada would be impaired in comparison with that of residents of another part and he might be denied information available to other Canadians which would be necessary for the formulation of his opinions upon public policy. The bill, it is reasoned, would place limitations upon the ability of the people of Alberta to take their proper place in the Canadian system of democracy, and inasmuch as the newspaper press was a nation-wide medium of communication, it infringes the federal jurisdiction definitely established in this sphere.

The bill also contains certain provisions about libel suits and the federal government holds that they invade a field of federal jurisdiction covered by the libel sections of the criminal code.

Such are the main issues which will be fought out before the court and the arguments may occupy several weeks. When the decisions are rendered, however, they are not likely to be final as appeals are certain to be taken to the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London, the highest court of the British Commonwealth.

Edmonton Leaders Mark Time During Court Test.

MEANWHILE in Alberta the Aberhart ministry has been holding its hand and has taken no further steps to establish a system of Social Credit. But one of its spokesmen recently declared that two tasks face the Social Credit Party in 1938: The mobilization of a greater strength of public opinion for a scheme which would secure abundant sufficiency for every citizen of the province out of its vast resources, and the subjugation of the machinery of finance and credit to popular control.

The opponents of the Aberhart ministry have been busy for some months past with plans to organize a united front of Liberals, Conservatives, United Farmers and Labor elements against the Aberhart ministry. Some initial success, which resulted in the defeat of the Social Credit candidate at a by-election in the city of Lethbridge, was achieved, but serious difficulties are now being encountered. They arise from a feeling that Mr. E. L. Gray, the recently elected leader of the Liberal Party, and his associates are scheming to use the United Front as cover for getting a Liberal majority in control of the legislature.

The Conservative Party is not anxious to see the Liberals in control of another province and after Mr. Bennett, the Federal leader of the Conservatives, paid recent visit to Calgary, his local followers withdrew from the United Front. Along with a group of United Farmers, they formed a separate organization to fight the Aberhart minstry.

Mr. Robert Gardiner, a former M. P., who is president of the United Farmers of Alberta, although he was defeated by a Social Crediter in 1935, has refused to lend his support to the move for a party union to defeat Premier Aberhart and has asserted that the Liberal Party at Ottawa has caused the farmers of Alberta far more loss than the Social Credit ministry at Edmonton.

Moreover, the idea is spreading among the farmers that the union movement is being financed by banks and other financial interests who are bent upon ousting the Aberhart ministry from office at any cost and so the impression of impartial observers on the spot is that the ministry's position has rather been strengthened in recent weeks.

Indeed, Mr. Gray, the Liberal leader, admitted, in a recent statement that unless "very definite, constructive, progressive policies" are offered the Alberta voters in the rural constituencies, they would refuse to turn against the present government. At the same time he declared that the Liberay Party agreed with many of the aims of the Social Credit Party and only differed about the methods to be employed in achieving them.

Wars Don't End

By

The Stony Path Of Conquest.

THE OLD SAYING that it takes two to make a war certainly does not hold true any more, if ever it did. Now it takes only one to make a war. But it still takes two to make peace.

This fact our present-day Caesars have begun to find out, and the discovery is proving unpleasant. For not a single war which they started during the past six years has thus far been effectively concluded.

It is now more than six years since Manchuria was overrun by the Japanese army. Two years and three months have elapsed since Italian troops invaded Ethiopia. The Spanish civil war, from its very inception an international war in disguise, is now in its eighteenth month. And half a year has gone by since the Marco Polo Bridge incident which ushered in the present ghastly conflict in China.

• • • •

THERE ARE many points of difference between these conflicts. But they resemble each other in three important particulars. In the first place, all were the result of deliberate aggressions. All have been waged without benefit of any declaration of hostilities. And in every instance the path of the would-be conquerer has been long and stony.

From a military point of view, Japan had an easy time of it in Manchuria. Its armies met with practically no resistance. But even now, six years after the seizure of Mukden and nearly five years after the establishment of the puppet state of Manchukuo, resistance to the invaders continues. Japan today is forced to maintain in the presumably conquered region two or three times the number of troops that were there in 1931.

Indeed, it can be argued with a very considerable show of reason that the present fighting in North and Central China is the direct continuation of the Manchurian war. For one of Japan's grievances against the Nanking government was the latter's refusal to recognize the "independence" of Manchukuo and its unwillingness to "co-operate" with Japan.

Furthermore, the conquest of Manchuria could hardly be said to be complete as long as the puppet state was flanked on the north, the west and the south by hostile governments—Russia, Outer Mongolia and China. For strategic reasons, as well as because Manchuria has so far proved to be an economic liability rather than an asset, the Japanese militarists felt it necessary to go on the warpath once again—this time in China proper.

• • • •

ITALY'S situation in Ethiopia would seem to be simpler. The defeat of Haile Selassie's armies and the capture of Addis Ababa was followed by the collapse of any large-scale organized resistance. But every report emanating from Italy's new empire indicates very clearly that the conquerers are in no position to exploit their gains.

Guerrilla warfare continues; life in the interior is more unsafe under nominal Italian rule than it was before the conquest and Italy is faced with the necessity of continuing an endless and, in the long run, thankless task of pacification which is steadily draining her far from ample resources.

The capture of the enemy capital, Mussolini has discovered, is not enough to bring real peace to a wartorn land as was so often the case in the past. And now the Japanese—who hold in their hands not only Nanking but Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai and Hangchow as well—are discovering that the same fact holds true in China. In both instances an undeclared war is resulting in an unrecognized peace differing from the former, if at all, in degree but not in kind.

• • • •

IN SPAIN the present-day Caesars were so certain that their intervention on the side of the insurgents would prove speedily conclusive that as far back as 14 months ago they recognized Franco as the real ruler of Spain.

Since then they have been trying to persuade themselves they had only miscalculated the date of Franco's triumphal entry into Madrid and Barcelona, not the ultimate outcome of the fighting. And when the insurgents, during the past year, succeeded in capturing Malaga, Bilbao, Santander and Gijon a great many in this country and elsewhere tended to agree with them.

But the recent capture of Teruel by the Spanish government forces and the equally significant fact that the latter have managed to hold that city despite a furious onslaught by the largest army ever assembled by the insurgents have thus thrown doubt on the numerous predictions of ultimate insurgent victory.

The exact opposite may prove true. Indeed, the question now arises whether any force which Mussolini could afford to send to Spain at this time to supplement the troops he has already dispatched there could bring about a material change in the situation.

• • • •

IN THE OLD DAYS conquest was a relatively simple matter, given an overwhelmingly superior military force such as the Japanese possess in China, the Italians enjoyed in Ethiopia and the insurgents, plus their Moorish, Germany and Italian allies, had at the outset in Spain.

That is why the great empires of the world were built at so relatively slight a cost in terms of military manpower and action. But the situation has changed since them. In the old days the invaders represented more often than not only a different kind of overlord. Now, however, national sentiment, which has always been strong in Spain, as shown from the days of Ferdinand and Isabella to those of Napoleon, is also growing in the outlying parts of the world.

Undoubtedly the Japanese, when they began their present war in China, regarded Chiang Kai-shek as just another war lord who could be intimidated by a show of force as he had been intimidated so often in the past. They failed to take into account that his resistance to Japanese aggression was not personal but national, that in refusing to bow the knee to the invaders he symbolizes the attitude of his people. Under the circumstances no peace which Japan can ever manage to impose on China could ever be anything but an uncertain peace—a breathing spell between wars. But even that kind of peace still remains out of Nippon's grasp.

The fact is that the kind of wars which our modern Caesars have been waging never end. For they are fighting against not so much armies as sentiments. And you cannot destroy what is in the heart of a people with bullets and bombing planes and other instruments of mass destruction. In attempting to do that they are only paving the way for their own ultimate destruction.

A New Jargon

H. N. In The Christian Science Monitor.

Radio Shop Talk.

IF YOU ARE familiar with a large share of the half million words in the new Oxford dictionary but want to increase your vocabulary still further you might drift behind the scenes in a radio broadcast station some time and listen to the "shop talk" used there.

Artists have to forget their traditional sensitiveness when they hear what broadcast people call them. If an actress is an elderly tragedienne she is "Lady Macbeth." A "canary" is a soprano and "Mme. Cadenza" is likewise. If the performer is a sepulchral bass he is the "Old Sexton." The xylophonist becomes the "woodchopper." And the announcer or commentator is the "spieler."

• • • •

SOME of the phrases denoting the performance or traits of an artist are trenchant—if not entirely pleasing. They may be applied to anyone from the uncultured "corn fed" performer to the "big name" talent. A "creeper" has a tendency to draw closer and closer to the microphone in the course of the performance. If he elbows others aside to get up to the mouthpiece he is 'mike-hog." If he puts too much power into his voice, however, he may be a 'Town Cryer." Should his range be limited he has a "short voice." A thin, wabbling tenor voice is "gelatine." A speaker who muffles his words is "talking in his beard." One who sounds too haughty is accused of "talking down." If one reads like a robot he is asked to put more "light and shade" into the talk.

Tom McCarthy

Interviews A 'Smart' Crook.

"I WAS a smart crook," he said, and then he smiled. And there wasn't anything like self-pity in his face. He merely saw the irony of it, because I was talking to him in the Federal Penitentiary at Lorton, Va. And he was there under sentence of from three to nine years.

McCARTHY.

He's a young man just verging on the thirties, but he looks years younger. He could pass for a college boy. And even in his prison garb he attained a certain dapperness. That, he told me, was part of his stock in trade.

"Maybe," he said, "it wasn't that I was so smart. Maybe the reason that I could boom a fountain pen, a pair of tweezers and a wad of gum into $60,000 in less than three years wasn't because I had so much on the ball. The real story is that there's nobody dumber than a smart business man.

"The business man," he said, "knows all the answers—except the right ones. And maybe if you'll put some of this stuff I'm going to tell you in print, he'll wise up, a little."

He wasn't at all bitter when he talked. If anything, he was merely analytical. And he sat there very coolly, occasionally running his hand over his dark curly hair, and flashing a youthful smile with white even teeth. It was easy to understand why people would automatically trust him.

Officials had told me that the prisoner I was interviewing had been credited with inventing a racket. And I'd been told that he was intelligent, so before getting the story of an almost unprecedented two and a half years of crime, which took him into nearly every State in the Union, I asked for a little background.

"How," I asked, "does a guy like you become a crook?"

"Honest," he said, and his face wrinkled in a smile, "sometimes, I wonder." Then his face went serious.

"It's not funny," he said. "I was just sort of a damn fool. I'll give you the background and you can check on it all you want. I'm not going to lie to you.

• • • •

"I GUESS I was an average kid. You know, baseball, dressing up big for the high school dances and all that sort of thing. A pretty average kid, not too bright and not too dumb.

"For a while I worked as a bell hop in a hotel. And there I worked out a trick which earned me $60,000 and sent me down here for three to nine years." He didn't mention that he had several detainers waiting for him, when his term was up at the Federal prison, and that he might go back for even longer sentences immediately upon release.

"One night," he said, "some salesmen were laughing in the lobby about one of their customers who had been stuck by a check forger. I was just curious, and it kept rattling around in my head, as to how the dickens a guy could forge another guy's name.

"At the time, I didn't have any idea at all that I might try to do that. And that's the McCoy. Well, I kept thinking about it and I finally doped out a way. Sign your initials to that note paper you're writing on and I'll forge them—and show you how."

I wrote my initials on a slip of paper and pushed it toward him.

"Remember," he said, "when I started doing this for money I didn't fool. I was careful. Now, I just want to demonstrate." He took a pencil and using the flat side of the sharpened end he put a layer of lead dust on the reverse side of the paper I'd handed him.

Then he placed the initialed sheet on another piece of paper.

• • • •

"MY HANDS aren't so steady," he said, as he ran the point of the pencil over my initials. "When I was really pushing paper, I used to make sure that I didn't pull a fast one. I used to soak my hands in a basin of water filled with ice cubes. That steadied them. When I could hardly stand the cold I'd take my hands out of the ice water, dry them and get to work."

He removed the paper with my initials on it, and they had been transfered in a thin line of lead dust to the paper underneath.

"Now, lend me your fountain pen," he said. And working carefully he went over the facsimile of my initialed signature, in ink. When he had finished there was only a bare indication of the original pencil marking which he had traced.

"After this has dried for a minute," he said, "I'll put the finishing touches on it. And you'll see your own writing, or at least writing so close to it your friends wouldn't know the difference."

When the ink had dried he began to work on the signature with a piece of art gum eraser from the desk behind him. It was the same sort of eraser which can be purchased in any school supply store. Deftly polishing the signature he removed any trace of the original pencil marking, and passed the completed work toward me.

I was looking at my own initialed signature, and it was so perfect that if any one had presented it to me, I would have readily acknowledged it.

"That's the very simple system I worked out for forging a name when I was a bell boy at that Midwest hotel," he said. "I used to practice it just to have a little trick to show the kids at school. I never thought I'd use it for easy dough.

"But there's one thing you're probably wondering now. Could I do this trick on bank paper? You bet I could! I've hit banks in almost every State in the country. And I only ran into two banks using check papers that were really erase proof.

"But now, I've told you the basic method of forgery. What you want to know is how I became what is nicely referred to as a crook. I'll tell you that, and without boasting, I'll tell you how I added a new racket to old-time forgery."

Tomorow: The second in a series of three Tom McCarthy articles on a Federal prisoner who gave a new twist to old-time forgery.

2,000 Nurses To End Parley Here Tonight

Dinner and Motion Pictures at Lafayette Hotel to Close Sessions.

Nearly 2,000 nurses attending the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Graduate Nurses Association and the League of Nursing Education of the District will conclude their two-day session here tonight with a dinner at the Lafayette Hotel.

Following registration of members and a business session yesterday, Ida F. Butler, national director of the American Red Cross Nursing Service, addressed the group at a luncheon at the Association of American University Women.

Problems arising from use of nonprofessional workers for nursing in the home were discussed at a general session during the afternoon. The discussion was opened by Mary A. Hickey, superintendent of the nursing service of the Veterans' Administration.

Business sessions will take up the early morning program of the organizations today, with a general session of the private duty nurses section scheduled for 10:30 a. m. Pauline S. Baker, chairman, will preside at the meeting and Dr. J. Lloyd Collins, clinical instructor at George Washington Medical School, will speak.

The dinner and motion pictures of South America will conclude the session at 7:30 tonight.

Officers of the District League of Nursing Education who are attending the meeting are Eugenia K. Spalding, president; Sena Anderson, vice president; Katherine Read, secretary-treasurer, and Sister Olivia and Mary Hickey, directors.

Princeton Chief Of Student Jobs Will Speak Here

Richard W. Warfield, in charge of Princeton University's program of student employment and financial aid, will speak tomorrow at a luncheon of the Washington Princeton Club, which will be attended by principals of several of the Capital's leading preparatory and high schools.

Warfield is director of the bureau of appointments and student employment, assistant to the director of admission and administrative officer of the university committee which awards scholarships and financial aid.

While in Washington he will interview applicants for scholarships and for admission to the university under its new "no-examination" plan.

The following school principals will be present at the luncheon:

E. F. Newton, of Western High School; Albert E. Rogers, of Friends School; Paul L. Banfield, of the Landon School for Boys; A. R. Hoxton, of Episcopal High School; L. T. Hoover, of Central High School; Father Joseph O'Connell, of Georgetown Preparatory School; Norman J. Nelson, of Woodrow Wilson High School, and F. C. Daniel, of McKinley High School.

Air Photos Will Show Need of Flood Relief

Air photos showing the relation of Watts Run bed to homes in the Northeast part of Washington, through which the stream flows, will be exhibited at a meeting of the Northeast Boundary Citizens Association at 8 p. m. today at Burrville School, Division avenue and Hayes street northeast.

Howard D. Woodson, president of the associatoin, said yesterday the photographs were taken "to portray more vividly the deplorable situation and the necessity for flood relief . . ."

Ga. Legislator Scores Pay-Hr. Bill Approval

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 10.—Southern Governors "betrayed the South" by indorsing the principle of wage-hour legislation, State Representative Robert Elliott, of Muscogee County, told the Georgia House today.

Govs. Bibb Graves of Alabama and E. D. Rivers of Georgia said the Governors' conference in Washington indorsed no particular bill, but merely approved the principle of "establishing a ceiling above which the hours of work could not rise, and a floor below which wages could not fall."

Representative Eugene Cox, an opponent of the pending wage-hour bill, said the action of the Southern Governors "should be shocking to every person in the South."

Elliott, whose home is in Columbus, where many textile mills are located, called the wage-hour bill "an attempt to return textile business from the South to New England."

He said the bill was drafted by "Representative Connery, a Massachusetts Yankee, and Hugo Black, a Southern Democrat turncoat who sold out his section's interests in exchange for a job at $20,000 a year for the rest of his life."

Two Congressmen Criticize HOLC For Aiding G.H.A.

Two members of the House yesterday criticized the Home Owners Loan Corporation for donating $40,000 to Group Health Association, Inc., during debate on the independent offices appropriation bill.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the House Committee on Expenditures of Executive Departments, proposed that Congress curb such unauthorized expenditures.

"There must be some limit to prevent agencies from taking money we appropriate and turning it over to a health plan that will take bread and butter from our doctors and dentists," he said.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Where Is She, the Sweet, Old-Fashioned Girl Whom Men Could Respect? Asks Disillusioned Male.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The outspoken and inspiring letter which appeared in your column January 6, signed "Man Reader," is largely responsible for this bold invasion of your column with a question which not only perplexes but bewilders me. Before asking my question, however, I should like to impart a few facts from my own experience, which may enlighten you as I expound my views.

* * * *

I am a young man of 25, who has had two years of college education and whose ideals concerning love have been lifted bodily from the pedestal upon which I placed them during my formative years, and dashed to pieces on the hard ground of distrust. I have nothing but contempt for the young ladies of today. I wouldn't marry one for all the rice in China. They are little fools, out for a good time, and taking their love where they find it. I have had dates, many of them, and I regret to say that my experiences with our modern maidens have been quite distasteful, from an idealistic point of view.

* * * *

I have not yet been out with a young lady to whom I didn't make love, or didn't feel assured that I could make love, given a little time. And to those feminine nitwits who, at this point, are saying: "Tsk, tsk! What a terrible man!" I simply say that I am neither Casanova nor braggart. And that is just my point. I am an average boy, dating average girl, each of us from respectable homes; so you cannot attack my experiences from the standpoint of wrong associations.

* * * *

I wish a few of your other masculine readers would corroborate my statements by letter, and reveal conclusively the promiscuity prevailing among today's girls. If such letters aren't forthcoming, it's because men lack the intestinal fortitude to tell the truth. I am not proud of my love conquests. The situation is simply deplorable, as far as I am concerned. The streamlined females of today are making it more difficult for them to find husbands tomorrow.

* * * *

Now, at long last, my question is: "Where is the girl of yesterday—the girl whom we all respect, the sweet, smart, understanding girl who is capable of a true, fine and lasting love which she reserves for her future husband alone?" Does such a girl exist? Or are they all (pardon the phrase) on the make?

ANOTHER MAN READER.

Foolish Disenchantment.

DEAR A. M. R.: Surveying this situation superficially, one might say this was a case of the pot calling the kettle black. One mighe say—if it is true that underneath your blase exterior of casual, expert lovemaker, you are a desolated idealist, then it may be equally true that these girls who return your insincere caresses in kind are putting up exactly the same sort of front; that they are meeting fire with fire rather than reveal their disillusionment.

* * * *

However, I am inclined to think your disenchantment is more one-sided and of your own making. Those shattered romantic ideals of yours may be distressingly bound up with a chaste mother image. You may be looking for an utterly "impossible she." You may be the type of romantic infantilist who supposes that a woman who is capable of feeling and expressing an affectionate reaction to an attractive man is not a "good woman." You may attempt to measure a woman's whole worth by this one test, which of itself is likely to tell very little, if anything, about the range and depth of the adventurous modern girl's character, intelligence, sweetness, idealism and so on. And in making this sort of test, you may be standing in your own way of finding what you are looking for, through confusing girls as to what you really want and expect of them.

* * * *

I had supposed the better educated young people of today were sufficiently schooled in psychology—the science of self-understanding—to realize that men and women are cut from pretty much the same cloth—to know that the woman of sound physiological and psychological development is animated by urges as human and ideals as lofty, as those of the menfolk. I thought enlightened persons had done with the nonsensical, lace-valentine theory that women had to choose between two positions in man's esteem—that of perching perilously on a pedestal, or being the dirt beneath his feet. I thought it was generally recognized that she was his co-equal in emotional, social, intellectual and spiritual potentialities.

* * * *

I am absolutely convinced that a realistically idealistic person—one whose standard of fine values is valid, genuine, authentic—given the prerogative of taking the initiative in establishing social relationships (as a man always is) simply could not find himself, time after time, in situations that affronted his mind and soul. In the first place, he would choose his social companions with intuitive regard for real value, for fundamental rapport. And in the second place, such a person has a curious, almost a miraculous, faculty for evoking unsuspected depths of delicacy and idealism and sympathetic appreciation in the breasts of others who might—until they found themselves in such inspiring company—have seemed to be persons of definitely coarser clay. In other words, he has a gift for "bringing out the best in others' as we say.

* * * *

When the time comes that you are able to look upon a girl as a human being, not as a potential goddess or the nether extreme, and when you have acquired the civilized faculty of exploring minds and hearts with kindly understanding, I think you will find an amazing number of old-fashioned girls masking behind sophisticated exteriors. But so long as you continue to be a half-baked sentimentalist, who is half-ashamed of his sentimentality, and who cloaks it in a pretense of romantic buccaneering; so long as you go around hoping to get your face slapped by girls of a "Sir, how dare you?" school, you have no right to expect any more affirmative association than you are encountering.

* * * *

The modern girl, as a rule, has too much of a sense of humor, is too much the sportsman, is too realistic in her estimate of human nature, to register outraged protest when a man offends her sensibilities by unwarranted lovemaking. But don't make the mistake of supposing she doesn't feel outraged, often times, to the very core of her being. But she figures she led with her chin, perhaps, and she might as well stand up to the blow. In other words, she meets your kind of pretense with her kind of pretense—and both of you retire from the encounter licking respective wounds to the spirit. M. H.

Prints Give Dash to Winter Ensembles

Balinese Patterns Are Popular; Exotic Colors Prevail.

By Ethel Ehlen,

The Post Fashion Editor.

This is the second in a series on how to enliven the winter wardrobe.

PRINTS, the precursors of spring, are again on the scene to add color and lightness to the winter wardrobe. Each season they get more attractive and interesting; this midseason's offerings are the epitome in color theme and pattern. They have character and chic, something that has been difficult to find in printed frocks in other years.

Another interesting thing about prints—they are ideal mediums for accessory color schemes; the same frock can take on a different appearance by an array of accents which pick out the various colors in the printed pattern. For this reason, multi-colored prints are more versatile than two-color theme versions (excepting black and white), as they can be highlighted by numerous bright-toned accessories.

The Balinese prints are occupying the spotlight at present; in pattern and color suggestive of the famous Island of Bali. Mexican, Mayan and Oriental prints are also coming in for a large share of popularity, particularly for costumes of the spectator sports type and for evening clothes. Any of these exotic prints are ideal as mediums to give a splash of color under the black fur or cloth winter coat. If you are ensemble-minded, you can have a turban or Breton sailor made to match your frock; a printed hat is also grand to furnish a spot of color to an entire black outfit.

Printed patterns this season show imagination—they mean more than just bright splashes of color on a dark background. The designs are well-spaced, which makes it easier for the dressmaker or designer to fashion more effective stylings without destroying the continuity of the pattern.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 10.

ONE of the lighter and more amusing features of living in New York is that it is unnecessary to be able to read at all.

ALICE HUGHES.

We are in the dream world of the artist and his little brother, the photographer. We just look at the papers. Holly means Christmas, and a bursting firecracker means the Fourth of July. Actually, it is just as simple as that. It is even simpler when it comes to the seasons—I mean those which concern the uptown boys and girls who are pursued by cameramen.

Take the "season" now closing. It has been the debutante season, and the papers have been filled with pretty girls in their late 'teens all decked out in their loveliest tulle, usually with treir harassed mothers looking on proudly but a trifle haggardly. Dozens of these delightful young creatures have been tossed bodily to the lions, until the lions have haughtily refused another bite.

As for the young men, so gorgeous in claw-hammer coats, many have not removed their white ties for days, and go about their petty affairs dressed as haughty head waiters, simply for lack of time to change. That season, however, is about over, and scores of mothers are in rest cures.

Oh, but we face another—in fact, it is even now upon us. That is the Palm Beach "season." And how do we illiterates know? Just by looking at the daily papers! One stares up at me this moment. I see two sets of youngsters on bikes, wearing the nicest of sports togs.

One, of course, consists of Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt, always a delight to the shutter-snappers. The other is the pet of the season, Miss Gloria "Mimi" Baker, wearing short shorts with tremendous effect, and one of her young men, Mr. Joeffrey Roche, wearing long longs. A pretty pair they make. So you see we know it is Palm Beach time. Or maybe Bermuda. I can't read well.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Every now and then so many people demand interviews with our friends of the theater and the movies that they are forced to grant what are known as "mass interviews," most of the interviewers being those eager, starry-eyed boys and girls to whom such a matter is an assignment in "English" or "Journalism." The latest victim of this crowd attack is my friend Frances Farmer, usually of the screen and now appearing on Broadway in "Golden Boy." Frances is both beautiful and brainy—a bad combination in Hollywood. On the 18th instant, Frances will cope with dozens of these budding journalists, being patient with their personal questions and even their silly ones.

* * * *

When it comes to writing love stories, our veteran English penman, Gilbert Frankau, is well up in the front pews. I've very much enjoyed his latest, called "Dangerous Years"—especially since in its pages the reader can get away from all the problems that render our time so unhappy.

* * * *

I looked at an enormous mess of jewelry over the holidays, and I think the gew-gaw I liked best was one of the simpler—at least in design. It adorned the person of Mrs. Thomas Chadbourne, and was a pin that boasted but one jewel—but that one a single sapphire as big as a healthy walnut, with just a few very unostentatious diamonds to set off the big baby. When I compare that single simple pin with the ropes of diamonds which have given me snow-blindness during the past few weeks, I feel very happy about Mrs. Chadbourne. Of course, I admit I could use that super-terrific sapphire, in a nice way.

* * * *

What is your attitude on "snoods?" Or do you have one? At any rate, many of the resort hats at which I have stared lately have "snoods," or at least, in 1938 parlance, a printed pouch attached to the back of the headgear to hold and protect the long bobs which still persist in spite of the frantic efforts of hair-dressers to make us put it up on top, and very fancy with little curls. Whether you like "snoods" or not, you'd better have one on your winter resort hat to nurture the long hair. M. Fou-Fou has spoken!

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Public Telephones.

The idea of germs everywhere may lead an unduly timorous person to an attempted avoidance of all the many objects with which our manner of living brings us into contact. More rational people, drawing upon their experience of general freedom from disease, realize that such an avoidance is futile and unnecessary.

The telephone is an instrument that comes in pretty intimate contact with a large number of people in all walks of life and all states of health. Yet the fact is, that after the most painstaking investigations, the use of millions of telephones every day for tens of millions of conversations has not produced one authenticated case of disease transmission by the use of the telephone.

The question has engaged the attention of the medical profession, and of public health services here and abroad. All the telephone companies of Europe and the United States have repeatedly studied the question, and have sponsored investigation.

The use of devices to make the mouthpiece more sanitary has been advocated by a number of inventors, but the experience of all the companies has been that these interfere with the efficiency of the telephone without serving any useful purpose.

The most successful of the solutions used to try to sterilize the telephone transmitter are heralded to the user by a strong odor. This gives a sense of safety, but the best germicides are not necessarily the ones with the most medicinal odor.

It is a fortunate fact that most germs (and all viruses which cause so many human diseases, including the common cold) do not live on nonliving surfaces. To keep them alive they must be in contact with living tissue, and human living tissue at that.

Columbia University, in New York, and the University of Chicago concluded extensive bacteriological tests in our two largest cities. A bacteriologist went on rounds of a large number of telephones, preferably public phones, and wiped a sterile moistened swab over the mouthpiece. Then he made cultures from these swabs to see what kind of bacteria he had. In both cities harmless bacteria were found and a few types of disease-producing bacteria were found. In Chicago, no diphtheria, no tuberculosis and no pneumonia germs were found. In the New York study no diphtheria and no tuberculosis were found, but some pneumonia types were found in the winter and spring months.

In Chicago, studies were made to see how long pathogenic bacteria would live on the telephone transmitters. Ninety per cent of germs were dead within one hour, and nearly all of them died within 15 minutes.

Stocking Colors.

Here are the new spring colors to ask for in getting stockings for Southern clothes or prints: "Windsor" is a lively beige to wear with sports colors and tarragon green; "Hollywood" is a sunny beige to wear with prints, white or baroque pastels; "Floritan" is a soft beige for multi-colored prints.

CAPITAL DISHES

Individual Plum Puddings Served at Women's City Club.

By Jean Green.

INDIVIDUAL plum puddings made by an old English recipe were served by Mrs. George Newman Matthews, 217 Bradley boulevard, Chevy Chase, Md., following her lecture before the travel section of the Women's City Club Thursday evening.

These individual puddings, which Mrs. Mathews makes "just for the fun of it," were packaged most attractively. They came in small colorful pottery bowls, topped with parchment paper, cheese cloth, and red and green cellophane. They are prepared for serving by placing in a pot of boiling water for one hour, then served with either hard sauce or English custard sauce.

"The puddings are typically English," said Mrs. Mathews, "I have never been able to find anything near like them on the American market. I have shopped for them in all of the principal cities. But I have not been able to find any with the same flavor and moist texture as the genuine English puddings."

Mrs. Mathews suggests these two sauce recipes to serve with Englisn plum pudding:

Hard Sauce.

Cream ¼ cup of sugar. Add gradually 1 cup of powdered sugar. Beat until very light. Add 2 tablespoons of wine, rum, or brandy. Pile on a dish and sprinkle with nutmeg.

English Custard Sauce.

Melt 2 tablespoons of butter (do not brown) add 2 tablespoons of flour, stir until smooth, add 3 tablespoons of sugar, pinch of salt, 2 cups of milk, stirring constantly until mixture thickens, allow to boil gently for 3 minutes, remove from the fire and add 1 teaspoon of vanilla or 1 tablespoon of brandy or wine. Serve with the pudding.

This steamed pudding is typically English and has been used by Mrs. Mathew for many years.

English Suet Pudding.

Soak 2 cups of bread crumbs in ¾ cup of milk. Add 3 eggs (well beaten) 1 cup of brown sugar, ½ teaspoon of salt, 1 teaspoon of cinnamon, ½ teaspoon of cloves, ½ teaspoon of nutmeg, 1 cup of chopped suet. Dredge with flour, and add 1 cup of currants, 1 cup of seedless raisins (cut fine), a little candied lemon peel, orange peel, and citron. Dissolve 1 teaspoon of soda in a little hot water. Pour into 1 cup of molasses and add to the mixture. Sift in 1 cup of flour. Flavor with 1 teaspoon of vanilla and 1 wineglass of sherry wine. Steam in a covered mold from 3 to 3½ hours.

Queen of Puddings.

Beat together the yolks of 4 eggs and 1½ cup of sugar. Add 1 quart of sweet milk, grated rind of 1 lemon, 1 pint of fine bread crumbs, and butter the size of an egg. Bake. When done spread a layer of jam or jelly over the top and cover with a meringue made of the stiffly beaten whites of 4 eggs mixed with ½ cup of sugar and juice of ½ lemon. Brown lightly in the oven. Serve either hot or cold.

Cocktail Party Or Tea? Guests Should Be Told

Etiquette Requires Clear Invitations to Afternoon Function.

By Margaret Wallace

"WHAT is the difference between a cocktail party and a tea?" one woman writes to this department. "I was asked to a tea recently and not a sign of tea appeared. A long table in the dining room was arranged with a bowl of cocktails and many cocktail glasses and trays of canapes. I wish to give a tea for some friends of my mother. I also wish to give a cocktail party. My husband says that my invitations to my mother's party should be definitely for tea and when I intend to serve only cocktails to say so. I intend to issue these invitations informally over the telephone."

It is not proper to call a cocktail party a tea. Sometimes the invitations for a cocktail party are issued under the guise of an at-home. It seems silly to ask people to come in for tea when you mean cocktails. Many hostesses serve tea and cocktails both and in this circumstance it is proper to designate the entertainment as either a tea or a cocktail party.

Tea, Coffee Served.

Some of the most successful hostesses not only serve tea and cocktails but tomato and orange juice at the same parties. This is a wise solution when there are to be many guests of different types.

Some hostesses serve cocktails and other beverages at the long table in the dining room and have a tea table in one corner of the room. A popular custom among many Washington hostesses also is to have tea and coffee served at either end of the large dining room table and have cocktail and punch tables at the sides of the room or even through the halls and other rooms when the party is a large one. Sandwiches, cakes, canapes and other such refreshments of an afternoon tea or cocktail party are placed on the tables.

When the tea or reception or at-home is one at which ice cream and sherbet are served, it is usual to have these on side tables also or passed to the guests on trays by the servants or the women assisting the hostess. The assistants also may pass the sandwiches and cakes.

Arrangement Explained.

For the informal tea many hostesses have the tea table in the drawing room with tea tray and cups and plates of sandwiches and cakes and also have arrangements for serving cocktails and highballs at the same table. This takes a larger table than the ordinary tea table.

One woman has asked how to arrange the tea napkins on the tea tray or tea table. They are usually placed folded on the tea plates and arranged so that when a plate is taken from the stack when each individual is served there will be a napkin on it. Some hostesses do not like this "layer cake" effect of plates and napkins and have the napkins in a neat pile on the tea table.

Dignity Illusion May Be Created By Mirror Magic

If you want to create the illusion of spaciousness and add dignity to a small room, invest in mirror magic. And one of the spots where this sleight-of-hand is usually needed is the dining room.

Mirrors on the wall arranged in such a manner as to reflect into each other makes a small room seem larger and brighter. An obtrusive wall can be made to fade into a more distant background by placing a large mirror on it or fastening large strips of mirrors direct on the wall.

Either crystal clear or fresh tinted mirrors will enhance any color scheme if properly placed about the room. Copper back mirrors take away the worry of deterioration, for they are not affected by atmospheric conditions.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Simple Arithmetic Shows How Many Calories You Can Take.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU have lapsed from a size 14 to a size 18, blame it on the calories. Calories are those pernicious little food units that add to your weight and detract from your appearance. Let's sit right down and figure out a way to get them under control.

Unless you are a Phi Beta Kappa, you probably dislike arithmetic as much as I do, so we will make our calorie calculation as simple as possible.

What is your normal weight? Write that figure down and multiply it by 16. For example, if you should normally weigh 130 pounds, then 130 by 16 equals 2,080. Your normal weight, multiplied by 16, represents the number of calories you can take without gaining or losing weight.

But you want to lose. Then use only two-thirds your normal calorie allowance, so that you can draw on stored fat for one-third your calorie needs. In the case of the reducer who should weigh 130 pounds, this would be about 1,300 calories.

Perhaps you would like to know why we use the figure 16 as the multiplier. This is the average activity integer. Scientists have found that we use from 14 to 20 calories per pound body weight. With practically no exercise, we use 14 calories per pound; with light exercise, 16 calories per pound and with fairly active exercise, 18 to 20 calories per pound body weight.

You are likely to be optimistic about the amount of exercise you take. If you are overweight, you are taking too little exercise to burn the daily calories. Modern housekeeping is classified as light exercise and 16 is the average factor for this type of activity. You may work hard and not use the large muscles which burn the most calories. Women office workers use 14 to 16 calories per pound body weight. This factor is, of course, modified in accordance with outside activity. The average man office worker uses around 16 calories per pound body weight.

Weight Multiplied by 16 Gives Key to Diet for Reducing.

around 16 calories per pound body weight.

The reason we take normal weight rather than present weight as the basis for calculating energy requirements is that excess fat is not active tissue and, therefore, uses few calories.

But by cutting the calories intake to two-thirds your requirement you live in part on your own body fat and are able to lose weight at the rate of 1 to 2 pounds per week. Two-thirds your normal calorie allowance makes a safe reducing diet, providing it includes daily the essential food elements.

Since the reducing diet for the average woman should contain 1,200 calories per day, the daily reducing menus are balanced at that figure. Add or subtract calories in accordance with your needs.

Cutting down the calories and increasing your exercise will gradually restore your weight to normal and your silhouette to symmetry.

Mrs. Townsend Is Given Ovation at 100th Fete

Notables Captivated by Swedish Singer and Czech Pianist; First Lady and Three White House Predecessors Send Congratulations.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's one hundredth musical morning at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday came off with flying colors, a stack of congratulatory telegrams and bursts of applause resounding to the ceiling of the gilt ballroom.

If the concert had marked any besides the hundredth event sponsored by Mrs. Townsend, it would still have been a red-letter occasion. Mme. Gertrud Wettergren, Swedish mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, and Ruda Firkusny, Czechoslovakian pianist, making his American debut, completely captivated the large and distinguished audience.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The middle intermission was one of the high moments of the morning's entertainment, however. Mrs. Townsend herself walked on the stage to express her appreciation of interest in the project she has sponsored for 15 years. Many in the audience remembered her first concert, held at the Hamilton hotel, when Mary Garden was the artist she introduced to Washington music lovers.

That first year Mrs. Townsend brought a number of artists to the Capital, including Wanda Laudowska, harpischord-pianist performer, with Jacques Thibaud. Also, Dusolina Giannini, Felix Salmond, Georges Enesco and many others. In the seasons since then many more of the world's most famous artists have come here under her aegis.

When Mrs. Townsend asked for a vote yesterday as to whether the audience wanted the concerts to continue, she learned from the thunder of "ayes" rippling into a burst of applause that her concerts are among Washington's favored institutions.

Reads Messages From Famous Folk

In the audience, which was one of the most brilliant thus far this season, were socres of social notables. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was in Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith's box. Mrs. Cordell Hull occupied the Presidential box in the absence of Mrs. Roosevelt. Her guests were Mrs. Walter Chandler, Mrs. Herron Pearson, Mrs. Clarence W. Turner, whose husbands are Representatives from Tennessee; also, Mrs. T. Dwight Webb, wife of the vice chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, and Mrs. Robert Gates.

Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, in black broadtail with a silver fox scarf and black hat, was in the audience; also Mrs. Tracy Dows, in a black suit trimmed in brown fur and worn with a close-fitting black hat; Miss Katherine Judge, Mrs. Victor Mallet, in black tailored coat with a silver fox scarf and a black buccaneer hat; Miss Bell Gurnee, in a beaver coat with a small brown hat; Mrs. John Farr Simmons, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, in a black coat with a gold-colored blouse and a black tricorne with a veil; Mrs. William Bankhead, in a black ensemble set off with silver fox; Mrs. Jouett Shouse, in a black outfit set off with a towering hat, and many others.

Notables Attend Post-Concert Luncheons

In keeping with her custom, Mrs. Townsend entertained a number of distinguished guests at luncheon following the concert. Guests of honor were the artists of the day—Mme. Wettergren and Mr. Firkusny.

The Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, whom Mme. Wettergren is visiting, were ranking guests. Others in the company were the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, and the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban, who are entertaining Mr. Firkusny.

Also from the diplomatic circle were the Counselor of the Swedish Legation and Mme. Wennerberg, C. A. R. Wastfelt, Swedish Attache, and the Secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation and Mme. Kabelac. Other guests were Mrs. Eldridge E. Jordan, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Mrs. George T. Marye, Mrs. Frederick H. Bugher, Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, Mrs. Catherine Tenney, Miss Ethel Worthington, Miss Virginia Bacon, Ralph Hill, Clarence Hewes, Winant P. Johnson, Ray C. B. Brown, Glenn D. Gunn, Orlando Barera and Fritz Kitzinger.

Frau Dieckhoff, wife of the German Ambassador, was guest of honor at Mrs. George C. Thorpe's luncheon following the concert. Other, in the company, were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Frau von Boetticher, Mrs George Messersmith, Mrs. Garland S. Ferguson, jr., Mrs. Charles H. March, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. John Dwight, Mrs. Breckenridge Bayne, Mrs. Harry Blair, Mrs. Kingman Brewster, Baroness von Below, Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mrs. Daniel Devore and Mrs. Frank Baldwin.

Mis. Janet Richards entertained seven guests at luncheon after the concert. They were Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis, Maj. and Mrs. Edward A. Keyes, Mrs. Townsend Whelan, Mrs. James G. Wentz, Miss Grace Burton and Miss Margaret Gage.

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, wife of Representative Brewster, of Maine, was luncheon guest of Mrs. Charles O. Maas of New York, another entertaining after Mrs. Townsend's concert. Mrs. Maas' other guests were Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, Mrs. Robert H. Chapman, Mrs. Francis Walker and Mrs. Davis B. Wills.

Mrs. Roosevelt's Calendar for Week Crowded

Will Be at Mrs. Garner's and French Embassy Here Today.

Mrs. Roosevelt's calendar continues to be crowded. Her program for the next seven days was divulged toward the end of a press conference yesterday morning devoted largely to a report of expenditures of American families, given by Dr. Louise Stanley and Dr. Day Monroe, of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Labor.

The First Lady, reading from her little black book of appointments, revealed that she was to entertain at two teas yesterday afternoon. Today she will be luncheon guest of Mrs. John Nance Garner, following attendance at the ceremony at the French Embassy when a copy of Mme. Curie's biography is presented.

This afternoon she will entertain a group from the Young Democrat's Club of Delaware County, Pa., and tonight, with the President, she will entertain at the annual reception honoring the judiciary. A luncheon and the receiving of two groups at the White House are on her calendar for Wednesday. That evening she will be speaker at the forum of freshmen at George Washington University.

The diplomatic reception stands alone on her Thursday's schedule. Friday she will be off to Philadelphia to speak before a noon meeting of the United Charities Campaign, and Saturday, at 3:30 o'clock, she will speak before the Progressive Education Association. Monday her press conference will be held at 10:30 instead of 11 o'clock, so that she can attend part of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale. She will be guest of honor at Mrs. Woodring's luncheon that day, and in the afternoon she will receive at two teas.

Yugoslavian Minister And Wife to Entertain

Ranking guests will be the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil and the German Ambassador and Frau Dieckhoff. Covers will be laid for 22 guests.

Notes of Society

Lang, Miss Frances Herndon, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cantrell, all of Maryland.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

A NUMBER OF prominent Washington women are talking these days, not about White House receptions and embassy teas, but about whether to wear hose of lisle or rayon to boycott Japanese silk.

Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Pennsylvania Governor, is among those trying to decide whether to wear—or not to wear—silk stockings. Although admitting she is not yet won over to the rayon point of view, Mrs. Pinchot is nevertheless lending her house to the League of Women Shoppers for a fashion show on January 28. Lee Simonson, stage designer for the Theater Guild, and designer of the sets for "Amphitryon 38," is coming down from New York for the occasion, and a number of prominent women are loaning their names as patronesses for the event.

The list of league sponsors, beginning alphabetically with Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the former Undersecretary of the Treasury, includes Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, wife of the Treasury Secretary; Miss Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Mrs. Edward Costigan, wife of the Senator; Miss Dorothy Detzer, peace leader; Mrs. William O. Douglas, whose husband is chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission; Mrs. James Landis, wife of the former chairman, now Dean of the Harvard Law School; Mrs. Ernest Lindley, wife of the well-known journalist and political commentator; Mrs. John Collier and Mrs. Houston Thompson.

MRS. EDWIN COLEMAN, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler, is president of the league. Other officers include Mrs. Marquis Childs, wife of the author of "Sweden the Middle Way," and "Washington Calling;" Mrs. Bernard Gould, Mrs. Laurence Duggan and Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel.

So far, the board is far more lukewarm about capitulating to the rayon school than is the membership which includes Miss Alice Barrows, Miss Peggy Bennett and Mrs. Edwin S. Smith. One member is downright enthusiastic about the glories of rayon and firmly states that stockings of this material last much longer and don't look shiny after washing.

LATEST LITERARY undertaking of Mrs. Winthrop Chanler is a translation of poems, "Hymns to the Church," by Gertrud von le Fort. "One must pay tribute to the masterly translation of Mrs. Chanler" says one reviewer of this volume. Besides being the author of "Roman Spring," and "Autumn in the Valley," this writer is mother of Lieut. Hubert Chanler, U. S. N., who married the former Gertrude Laughlin last fall.

ALTHOUGH HER VISIT to Washington was a flying one, literally and figuratively, Mrs. Willard Reed was warmly welcomed by her friends here last weekend. The former Mary Cowles resided in Washington until her marriage last fall took her to Chicago.

Mary had some interesting news of her sister, Virginia Cowles, of New York, who is now working on the London Evening Standard. After several weeks of covering the Spanish War from both camps, Virginia wrote an article on the situation which before publication, was read by Lloyd George and quoted by him in a speech. Later she lunched with him at his country home and writes her sister that the former premier was surprised to discover her a young lady instead of a bearded general. Virginia's social life has now boiled down to dining with cabinet ministers and lunching with people like Sir Robert Van Sittart.

Mrs. Cummings Will Entertain

Cabinet Wife to Hold Her First 'At Home.'

Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, will observe her first at home of the season tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 at Ruthven, her Tilden street home.

Those pouring tea will be Mrs. Frank Bohn, Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. James W. Morris, Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies and Miss Marguerite LeHand.

Assistnig during the afternoon will be Mrs. Harry W. Blair and Mrs. Fred Britten.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffeler have issued invitations to a display of paintings by A. G. Warshawsky Friday from 4 to 6 p. m. at the Raleigh Hotel.

Guests will also be able to meet the noted artist.

* * * *

The first of Charles Goren's talks on contract bridge, sponsored by Mrs. Carroll Frazer, was given last Thursday at the Sulgrave Club before an enthusiastic audience. The second talk will be on Thursday at 11 o'clock.

Charge d'Affaires Of French Embassy Entertains Today

Jules Henry, Charge d'Affaires of the French Embassy, will entertain today for Count Raoul de Roussy de Sales, French journalist.

Other parties on the schedule include the dinner to be given on Friday evening by the recently appointed Ambassador to Germany and Mrs. Hugh Wilson; Mrs. Francis Whitten's luncheon on Sunday and the luncheon to be given January 22 by Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot.

Birth Announced.

Dr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin announce the birth of a son on Sunday. Mrs. Hardin, the former Miss Dorcas Hull, is the daughter of Mrs. Edward B. Hull, of Pittsfield, Mass. Dr. and Mrs. Hardin live on N street in Georgetown.

E. B. Murphys Will Live Here

Former Dorothy Havener and Bridegroom Away on Wedding Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Murphy, whose marriage took place Sunday afternoon, are now on a brief wedding trip. Upon their return they will make their home in Washington.

Mrs. Murphy was formerly Miss Dorothy Boyd Havener. The ceremony at which she became a bride was held in the Oakton, Va., Methodist Church at 4 o'clock, with the Rev. Lowell W. Atkinson officiating.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, D. C. Jackson, of Nashville, Tenn. She wore an afternoon dress of black velvet trimmed with white lace and a small matching turban and veil. Her corsage was of gardenias.

Mrs. Louis H. Harris was the bride's only attendant. Mr. Harris was the best man. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harris in Rosslyn, Va.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd E. Havener, of Terre Haute, Ind. She attended Indiana University and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Murphy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Como Murphy, of Paris, Ill.

* * * *

Mrs. J. T. Manderschied and Miss Clara Manderschied entertained at tea Sunday afternoon in honor of Mrs. E. A. Blair and her son, H. L. Porter, who collaborated in writing "Three Saw the Murder," just published.

Among the other guests were E. A. Blair, Miss Katherine Hopson, Mr. and Mrs. Laureston Porter, Mrs. H. L. Porter, Mrs. Jane McLaughlin, Dean E. McLaughlin and Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Griffith.

Mrs. Hughes Returns.

Mrs. Hughes, wife of Lieut. Comdr. James J. Hughes, of the Panay, has returned to Washington from Palm Beach, where she spent the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Wrisley Brown.

At the Raleigh.

Col. Ralph P. Cousins, of Langley Field, Va., is at the Raleigh Hotel.

Many Dinners Precede Bal Boheme Pageantry as Arts Club Outdoes Itself to Stage Spectacular Show.

By Elizabeth Ford.

Elevators at the Willard last evening cruised to the tenth floor, where virtually all Washington disembarked on the "Island of Bali" at the Bal Boheme. Dancing . . . American fashion . . . got under way at 10 o'clock and went on until the milkman started making his rounds.

However, at 11 o'clock, several hundred members of the general public scattered to box seats, as the Arts Club began its Balinese pageant. The latter can be adequately described only by laying a whole row of oh's and ah's all the way from here to Batavia and back again. High priests in gold robes, dancing girls in crimson sarongs, umbrella men (carrying glorified versions of the common rainy-day variety), and temple attendants circled the ballroom, which was decorated with painted hangings and enormous exotic masks.

After several gong beats from the orchestra, the program of Balinese dancing started. At the conclusion of the "floor show" there was a grand march . . . and after that a flurry of pink supper tickets.

Many Dinners Precede Ball

Dinner galore preceded the ball. Miss Mary Barkley Adams was among those entertaining, her guests sitting down to a table loaded with white snapdragons and lilacs. Among those she wined and dined were Gen. and Mrs. Frederick Coleman, the latter wearing a gown of light blue lame with matching ear-rings for the evening; Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Arlon Cushman, Lewis Moneyway, president of the Arts Club; Miss Daisy Prentice, and Ralph J. Totten, former United States Minister to South Africa.

Col. and Mrs. Thomas H. C. Reed, she wearing blue net trimmed with paillettes, also gave a dinner party preceding the ball. Their guest list included Maj. and Mrs. Lester Dessez, Capt. and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Little, of Philadelphia, and Frank Henry Liotard. Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, who was a box hostess at the ball, dined with Representative and Mrs. Bertrand Snell earlier. The Snells did not attend the event at the Willard.

Mrs. Loose, gowned in black velvet, had as guests in her box the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, the latter wearing white chiffon trimmed with turquoise beads; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph E. Church and Col. William M. Morrow.

The chairman of the floor committee and Mrs. L. M. Leisenring also entertained guests for the ball. Among them were glimpsed Maj. Gen. Henry Gibbins and Mrs. Gibbins, Brig. Gen. A. Owen Seamon and Mrs. Seamon, who had chosen black velvet shimmering with sequins for the occasion; Miss Rose Clarke, Mrs. Joseph T. Clarke and Capt. and Mrs. Elsmere J. Walters. Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, in white satin, had as her guest Mrs. Barrett Ridgeley.

With Mrs. O. B. Campbell were Miss Maud Burr Morris, Miss Dorothy Plunkett, Miss Julia Schelling and Miss Jessie Small. Mrs. Willioughby Chesley, who wore white velvet and sequins, entertained Miss Grace Burton, Mrs. Carl Casey, Mrs. Ernest Daniel, Mrs. Samuel Ansell, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. Willard Hayes, Miss Jean Cole, Mrs. Guy Dove, Mrs. Virgil Jackson and Miss Elizabeth Northrop.

Officials in Special Box

The official box was occupied by Miss Bertha Noyes, chairman of the ball, whose own Balinese sketches formed much of the inspiration for the event; the vice chairman, Mrs. Ethel Hoffman Kane; Mrs. L. M. Leisenring, chairman of judges; Mrs. Frank Steele, wife of the vice president of the Arts Club, and Lewis Moneyway.

Mrs. Gerritt Miller, who also sat in the official box and whose husband was on the floor committee, wore an authentic Balinese sarong which Dr. William Mann had brought back from his trip to Sumatra last year.

In the box, Miss Noyes had as guests, her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Lesle, of Providence, R. I., who acted as hosts in her place for Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry, Gen. and Mrs. Daniel Devore, Mrs. Samuel Nicholson, Mrs. Bruce Merriman, Mr. and Mrs. John Matt Emochs.

Mrs. Goldberg Wed To Julian Behrend

Ceremony Held at Garbo Room of Shoreham.

The marriage of Mrs. Helene Friedlander Goldberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Friedlander, to Julian Charles Behrend, son of Mrs. Charles Behrend and the late Mr. Behrend, took place at noon yesterday in the Garbo Room of the Shoreham Hotel.

Witnessed by members of the immediate families, the ceremony was performed by Dr. Abram Simon.

The bride, who was unattended, wore an ensemble of hyacinth sheer wool, the coat of which was made in tuxedo fashion with gray fox down the front. With it she wore an off-the-face hat of navy blue, navy accessories and a corsage of violets.

Following a wedding breakfast, the couple left for New York, whence they sailed last night on the Pilsudski for a cruise to the West Indies. After February 1, they will be at home at the Meridian Park Apartments.

Women's Clubs to Keep Pace With Needs of U. S.

Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, Incoming President, Announces Program to Help Those Who Can't Solve Own Problems.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The program of the General Federation of Women's Clubs during the next three years will keep pace with the needs of the country as it has in the past, Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, incoming president, indicated in an interview yesterday. Mrs. Dunbar, unopposed candidate for election as president of the federation at the triennial convention in Kansas City next May, is here from her home in Portland, Oreg., for the meeting of the executive board, convening at headquarters tomorrow morning.

Under Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, citizenship was stressed, with "These United States," the slogan of her administration, Mrs. Dunbar pointed out. Under Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, who is rounding out her three years in office, educatoin has been the theme, with the slogan "Education for Living." Mrs. Dunbar, one of whose primary interests has been welfare work, declares it now is a time when the women of the Nation should devote themselves to helping solve the problems of the masses unable to solve their own.

"Without a reflection on the value of cultural programs," she said, "it is nevertheless necessary now that we face realities. We have come to the place where we are challenged as clubwomen to use our potential strength to aid those less fortunate than ourselves. We have pursued study and investigation and it is now time for action. We must change our approaches, discard some old ideas and certainly change many of our methods."

Must Look Beyond Individual Interests

Pointing out that the individual clubs in the federation sprang out of small group interests, Mrs. Dunbar expressed a desire that the women look beyond these as they never have done before and join in a common effort to give constructive support to those measures necessary to meet the country's problems.

She expects to come to Washington in the early summer—dreading the change from the comfort of her Oregon climate to the heat of the Capital — but nevertheless determined to begin at once on the task which is to fall on her shoulders. She will then complete the appointment of department chairmen, with the aid of her board.

The cultural angle of the federation work will be directed especially toward planning for the use of leisure time.

Mrs. Dunbar, by the date of the Kansas City convention, will have completed ten years' service in the general federation's executive committee. She served as chairman of the tuberculosis division and, in 1928, became chairman of the public welfare department and dean of department chairmen. She was elected recording secretary in 1932 and, in 1935, became first vice president.

For 22 years she has been the executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis Association, which has become, under her direction, one of the outstanding public health groups in the Nation. For several years she has been instructor in community organization in the University of Oregon Medical School's department of nursing education.

In recognition of her humanitarian work in social service, Oregon's Linfield College conferred upon Mrs. Dunbar the honorary degree of doctor of humane letters last June. She was the first woman to be granted an honorary degree in the college's 80 years of existence.

Mrs. Dunbar is a member of the National Tuberculosis Association, the American Association of Social Workers, a past president of the Social Workers Association of Oregon and of the National Conference of Tuberculosis Secretaries; a fellow of the American Public Health Association, a life member of the National Organization for Public Health Nursing and an honorary member of the Oregon State Graduate Nurses Association.

She finds time, too, for active membership in the P. E. O. Sisterhood, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the League of Women Voters, the Portland Woman's Club, the Tuesday Afternoon Club, Alpha Kappa Delta and the Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Dunbar has two children, Kathryn (Mrs. William D. Winter, jr.), a son, Allen, a recent graduate at the University of Oregon, and one grandchild, "Billy" Winter. Her husband died in 1928.

Mrs. Lawson Conducts Final Board Sessions

Mrs. Lawson presides today at the meeting of the executive committee which convenes for an all-day and evening session preceding the meeting of the executive board tomorrow. This board meeting will be the last of her administration.

Friday night, the program will be devoted to international relations, with a discussion by Dr. Herbert W. Wright, professor of international law at Catholic University, of a book soon to be issued by the General Federation entitled, "Basic American Treaties." The volume has been prepared by Dr. Wright, recognized as one of the country's foremost students of international affairs, with the co-operation of the State Department and the General Federation. It comprises a collection of the more important treaties underlying current American foreign policy concerning the maintenance of peace and the advance of war. It has been edited with explanatory notes with a view to making it comprehensible to lay groups and is expected to give an impetus to the study of international relations among the more than 14,000 clubs comprising the federation. Miss Alves Long is chairman of international relations.

Another speaker on the Friday evening program will be the Rev. George W. Shepherd, a member of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions who has taken an active part in the rural reconstruction of China and, for the past two years, has been honorary adviser to Gen. and Mme. Kai-shek, on the New Life Movement.

Head of D. A. R. Paris Chapter Visitor Here

Mrs. Hoover Hanger Was Founder of French Patriotic Unit.

An interesting visitor in Washington is Mrs. Hoover Hanger, founder and first regent of the Benjamin Franklin Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, in Paris, the first European chapter to be organized. With Mr. Hanger, she came to America early in December and has spent the last few weeks at the Kennedy-Warren, making short visits in nearby Virginia and Maryland.

Mrs. Hanger formed the Benjamin Franklin Chapter, March 13,1923, when Mrs. George Maynard Minor was president general. Soon after its organization the London chapter was formed, then a second one in Paris and these were followed by chapters in Rome and Berlin.

Mrs. Hanger also was the first state regent of Paris, an office now held by Miss Ada Howard Johnson, of this city. The Paris chapters elect either as state regent or state vice regent, a member who resides in this country so she can keep in close touch with national headquarters and attend the executive meetings. The membership in Paris includes Daughters of the American Revolution living there and French women whose ancestors helped the cause of the colonies in the Revolution.

The two chapters acted as hostesss to the visiting D. A. R.'s from this country on their bicentennial pilgrimage in 1936, when they presented to the French government the tablet with the names of the 132 French soldiers who gave their lives in the siege of Yorktown.

The Benjamin Franklin Chapter's activities have also included the gift of new gates to the Pictus Cemetery where Lafayette is buried, one bearing a tablet in memory of Lafayette and the other in tribute to Gen. John J. Pershing and the American Expeditionary forces in the World War.

It also contributed to the purchase of the house at Auray, night after his arrival in France, where Franklin spent his first endowed a memorial room in the American hospital at Neuilly, France, and gave money for the water works at Tilloloy.

In addition to its activities abroad it has done its part in D. A. R. work here, giving a French flag to be placed with others representing the State chapters in Continental Memorial Hall; giving the Lafayette room there and contributing a chair to Constitution Hall.

Mrs. Hanger, not only founded the D. A. R. abroad, but was among the active members of the American Woman's Club in Paris, which was an outgrowth of the Y. W. C. A. established during the World War. She has been president for the last two years of the Paris unit of the Women's Overseas Service League.

Martha Grahame Calls Dance A Poem in Movement and Music

Expert Tells Smith College Alumnae That Her Art Need Not Tell a Story, but Must Quicken Spectator's Emotions.

The dance need not tell a story; if it could be put into words, it should be a poem, Martha Grahame told members of the Smith College Club yesterday afternoon at a tea given in her honor at the home of Mrs. Howard Wilkinson. Miss Grahame, who comes from New York to conduct classes in Washington weekly, will present her dance group here January 21 at the Rialto Theater in a performance sponsored by the Smith Club for the benefit of its scholarship fund.

Miss Grahame explained that she never presented Oriental dances because she did not understand the people of the Orient nor how they thought and felt. Her dances are modern in the sense that they express life as it is today in America, she said. The movements are quick and angular because such are the movements of the machine age in which we live. The clothes are conceived with modern life as a basis and the music is written to fit the structure of the dance.

The musician, writer, artist or dancer who expresses the spirit of his time, is often considered by his contemporaries to be in advance of his time, said Miss Grahame, because his contemporaries are old-fashioned — still clinging to old modes and unwilling to accept the new. It is only the next generation or those beyond who recognize him as an interpreter of his day

The dance is not intended to tell a story, she said, but to quicken the spectator and make him alive to himself. If it could be expressed in words, it should be, she added, and should not be a dance. Music is written to suit the modern dance, she said and need not be music which stands alone as a musical composition for its purpose is to go hand in hand with its companion art.

Miss Grahame declared the dance is as old as man and is even known among birds and animals. The first book on it was written by a monk in the sixteenth century she said. She requires her students to know the background of the art and to be able to read music from the score as well as to understand the dance forms and interpretation.

Miss Grahame was accompanied by Miss Mary O'Donnell, who is a member of her group. Both wore black, their dresses fashioned with severe simplicity. Members of the club, who crowded the drawing room where she spoke, sat about on the floor informally during her talk.

Mrs. Wilkinson was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Frederick Libby, president of the club, who wore a rose-colored suit, with hat to match. Mrs. Wilkinson was in a rust-colored gown and Mrs. Kenneth Holland, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the program by the dancers, wore a deep red velvet dress, with hat of the same material.

Mrs. J. W. Guider, who wore a gunmetal lame gown, and Mrs. Frances Carpenter Huntington poured. Mrs. Huntington was in black. Assisting hostesses included Mrs. Karl Fenning, Mrs. E. A. Black, Mrs. B. L. Kirby, Mrs. L. P. Leake, Mrs. Warren F. Draper and Mrs. Allan H. Willett.

Members of the Washington Dance Association, headed by Miss Evelyn Davis, are co-operating with the club in handling tickets for the benefit.

Business Urged To Do Its Share

The great business enterprises of the United States were founded through the pioneering spirit and enterprise of the businessmen of the country, but today businessmen in whose hands lie the making of our industries appear to be too busy shuddering at governmental trends to give the pioneer spirit a chance to work, Charles O. Gridley, president of the National Press Club, told guests at the forum luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club yesterday.

Declaring that while businessmen continually are asking for assurance that the Government will do this and that, what is actually needed is assurance from the business leaders that they mean to cooperate with the Government. Business never has run the Government of a country based, as is ours, on the principles of democracy, Mr. Gridley pointed out. "It is a sad state of affairs indeed when business and the mass of voters are on different sides of the fence. I would like to see business start out now and sell the people the idea it is ready to co-operate."

Child Welfare Report Favors Private Effort

Child

the transfer of infants and young children in institutions to foster-homes. The expense of such a program, he said, would be less than that of accommodation in institutions, while evidence gathered by psychologists and pediatricians points to superior results when children of preschool age are brought up in a home atmosphere.

Extension of the functions of maternity homes to include a well-defined social, religious and vocational program, as well as medical treatment, was also urged.

Dr. Carstens' report is the last of a series of 16 undertaken with a grant of $5,000 from the Washington Committee of the Child Welfare League of America. Representing eight months of study by a staff of five welfare workers, 15 previous reports have analyzed programs of particular agencies, while yesterday's statement covered the entire child welfare problem in the District.

Opposes Court Action.

Although giving general indorsement to the performance of public agencies dealing with child welfare in the District, Dr. Carstens advocated several shifts of jurisdiction within the District government.

He described the child welfare division, rather than the Juvenile Court, as the logical body for deciding on the majority of cases involving commitment of children to the care of public institutions or officials.

A noncourt agency, he said, is also the proper group to receive reports of neglected children.

"The work of the Child Welfare Division is as much a part of the District government as that of the court."

Stresses Private Agencies.

Dr. Carstens also stated that close co-operation between the public assistance and Child Welfare Divisions of the Public Welfare Board would reduce the number of juvenile cases requiring separate attention.

Turning to private welfare service, he asserted it had been overshadowed by the public in Washington to a degree unequaled in any other American city.

However competent a city's public welfare service, he said, many types of assistance to children are best undertaken by private agencies.

"Cases really requiring only temporary commitment of children are more likely to stretch into permanent commitment when handled by public rather than private agencies," he said. In a voteless community, he added, private agencies serve a useful function in interpreting the citizens' desires in regard to a welfare program.

Meet Again in April.

Private child welfare work in Washington, however, "has not been woven into anything like a consistent well-knit program. The city needs a private service noncompetitive with the public service and noncompetitive within itself."

In discussion at the conclusion of Dr. Carsten's report, Elwood Street, director of public welfare, described the statement as "an extraordinarily valuable survey."

Adjourning the meeting, Mrs. Meyer said another session of the committee would be called in April to consider methods of putting the report's suggestions into effect, after discussion by the various agencies concerned.

23-Point Program.

Dr. Carstens' specific recommendations are as follows:

1. Reduction of the number of dependent children away from home requiring care in the District.

2. Increase of at least 50 per cent in the staff of the Child Welfare Division of the Board of Public Welfare.

3. Increase in relief funds and appropriations for aid to dependent children; close co-ordination between the Child Welfare and Public Assistance Divisions.

4. Amendment of the law to enable the Child Welfare Division to render service to dependent children in temporary care and in adjustment of families without necessity of temporary commitment and to place children for brief periods at public expense.

5. Original reference of all applications of dependent children, from whatever source, to the Child Welfare Division.

Out of Juvenile Court.

6. Amendment of the law so dependent children would not need to go into Juvenile Court for commitment unless a guardian needs to be appointed or custody changed.

7. Reference by the Child Welfare Division to the Children's Protective Association and the Children's Department of the Catholic Charities of such temporary and special problems as they are particularly competent to handle.

8. Construction and operation by the Child Welfare Division of a small receiving home with 50 beds and a staff of five to seven social workers, available for calls in children's homes; maintenance by the division of 15 subsidized boarding homes for dependent children.

Better Social Service.

9. Equipment of the receiving home as a diagnostic study home, with a psychiatrist and psychologist as staff members.

10. Development of a more complete and better quality of social service in connection with private institutions, sectarian and nonsectarian.

11. Equipment of St. John's Episcopal Orphanage for, specialized service to children as a diagnostic stud home in the private field.

12. Establishment of standard case committees by all agencies and institutions with professional social service.

13. Increase of staff and funds by the Children's Department of the Catholic Charities and the Children's Protective Association for foster family care in the private field.

14. Equipment of the Children's Department of the Catholic Charities to render complete social service to the various Catholic agencies of the diocese.

Foster Family Care.

15. Careful study of problems relating to proper allocation of children between public and private service and between institutional and foster family care, with the ultimate aim of allocation according to specialized service required rather than bed space and financial resources.

16. Immediate use of foster family care for part of their wards as an experiment by St. Ann's Infant Asylum and the Home for Foundlings.

17. Use of the Social Service Exchange by all children's agencies for common benefit from experience of individual organizations.

18. Encouragement for staff members of child welfare agencies to acquire additional professional training.

19. Special attention by the Council of Social Agencies to the question of adoptions.

Standard Medical Care.

20. Development of a standardized program for medical care, acceptable to both pediatricians and social workers.

21. Continuation of protective services by the Children's Division of the Catholic Charities and the Children's Protective Association; reference of problems requiring court action to the child welfare division.

22. Provision of vocational, religious and social training by maternity homes.

23. Continuation by the Secretary of the Social Service Exchange and chairman of the committee on children in homes of the Council of Social Agencies of their educational program with the various child welfare agencies and institutions, with special attention to social case work.

Newspapermen Will Study on Fellowships

Publisher's Widow's Will Provides Fund at Harvard.

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 10.—Newspapermen from all parts of the nation will study at Harvard University under a "frankly experimental" plan made possible by the widow of a Milwaukee publisher and announced tonight by the Harvard president, Dr. James B. Conant.

Fellowships allowing at least 12 or 15 active newspapermen to study in fields of their own choosing will be set up, Dr. Conant said, under a bequest of approximately $1,000,000 left to the university in 1936 by Mrs. Agnes Wahl Nieman, widow of Lucius W. Nieman, founder of the Milwaukee Journal.

In calling the plan "frankly experimental," Dr. Conant told the Harvard board of overseers it could be abandoned in favor of some other project if found impractical. He said, however, Harvard was "embarking on this enterprise with high hopes."

Ending months of speculation among the newspaper fraternity over disposition of the Nieman fund, Dr. Conant said the fellowships would be designed to enable reporters, editorial writers and special writers of at least three years experience to take any courses in any department or school at Harvard and to supplement this with private reading under faculty advisers.

The fellowships will carry amounts sufficient to make it possible for the holders to obtain leave of absence from their regular work without too great financial loss, Dr. Conant added.

The first fellowship holders will come to Cambridge next September.

Permanent Police Pension Fund Aim

A special District Commissioners' committee, headed by Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester L. Gray, formulated steps yesterday to place the policemen and firemen retirement funds on an actuarial basis.

"As the fund exists now," one of the committee said, "it is a year to year proposition," while District teachers and other District employes and Federal Government workers' funds are on a permanent basis.

Son of Bishop Disappears in Church Puzzle

Car Found on Bridge Where Man Jumped; Church Looted.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 10—The Rev. W. D. Bratton, son of the Episcopal Bishop of Mississippi, was missing today after his abandoned automobile was found parked on the Mississippi River bridge here.

Four persons reported that a man jumped from the bridge shortly after 9 a. m., Police Capt. Frank Glisson said.

The Rev. Mr. Bratton was rector of Grace Episcopal Church here. Glisson said the church was ransacked and an attempt made to set it afire Saturday night.

The clergyman-son of Bishop Theodore Dubose Bratton, of Jackson, Miss., left home this morning to drive a son to school, Mrs. Bratton told police. He failed to return. She said he "was depressed."

Bishop Bratton is chancellor of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn.

Last August another son, Randolph, was found shot to death in Winnsboro, S. C. He had received treatment for several years at a veterans' hospital in Columbia, S. C., for World War wounds.

Affidavits Bare 'Debauchery' of Hoover's Crew

ond officer, who stood guard at the door with a pistol.

"Officers of the engineer's department and some members of the crew were quiet and well-behaved, and I believe they would have assisted the passengers had the responsible ship's officers done more to assert their authority and maintain order."

Stevens said the officers told a committee of male passengers that "they were up against a labor racket and were more or less powerless to interfere with the crew, who belonged to a strong labor union and who took the view that when ashore under such circumstances they were no longer in the employ of the Dollar company and were therefore not obliged to work for a passenger or to obey anyone's order."

(A few days after the Hoover disaster the Sailors Union in San Francisco denied crew members had been intoxicated or disorderly.)

Five Affidavits Sent.

The five affidavits sent to the Capitol yesterday by the State Department were gathered by Addison E. Southard, American Consul General at Hongkong. They were requested by Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, which handles merchant marine legislation.

Edith F. Dunlop, a British citizen and a resident of Hongkong, who was a passenger on the Hoover, said "there were disturbances, fights and swearing all around the place.

Some time during the night a woman," she added, "whom I believe was a stewardess, came running to the door of our building and said, 'Is there an officer here? Come at once. They're breaking into the hospital.' There was an officer there who had been on guard and he and several other officers went out. We ourselves were told by this officer not to go outside for at least an hour, because it was not safe.

"In the early morning hours before dawn a Japanese naval landing party came up and was greeted with applause by the passengers. We felt relieved they were there. They posted guards at various places.

The Senate Commerce Committee today will resume hearings on the Copeland bill to set up a mediation board, modeled after the Railway Labor Board, to handle maritime labor disputes. Such a board was suggested by Chariman Joseph P. Kennedy, of the United States Maritime Commission, in a report to Congress which called labor conditions in the American merchant marine "disgraceful."

Ralph Emerson, legislative representative of the National Maritime Union, this afternoon will suggest operating subsidies be denied to shipping companies who ignore the provisions of the national labor relations act.

Glass Unable to See Price Inauguration

By the Associated Press.

Members of the Virginia Congressional delegation, with the exception of Senator Glass, planned today to attend the inauguration Wednesday, January 19, of James H. Price as Governor of Virginia. Glass' aides said today he would not be able to attend.

Most of the members also said they hoped to attend the reception Wednesday of the retiring Governor, George C. Peery.

Convent to Raise Fund With Opera

A program of grand opera highlights will be presented at the Rialto Theater Saturday by the Columbia Grand Opera Company of New York, it was announced yesterday by the board of women managers of the Association of the Convent of the Perpetual Adoration.

Proceeds from the concerts, which will be presented during the afternoon and evening, will go toward the building fund being raised by officers of the board under the direction of Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton.

Organized in 1875, the association contributes to poor churches throughout the country, and more than 100 women now are sewing and mending garments at the convent here. The garments are distributed to churches in the United States, Alaska and the Philippines.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Just a common cough, a chest cold, or a bronchial irritation of today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. They may be relieved now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medicinal combination designed to aid nature in soothing and healing infected mucous membranes by allaying irritation and inflammation and by aiding in loosening and expelling the germ-laden phlegm.

The Medical Profession has for many years recognized the beneficial effect of Beechwood Creosote in the treatment of coughs, chest colds, and bronchial irritations. A special process was worked out by a chemist, for blending Creosote with other ingredients and now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of genuine Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children.

Creomulsion is one preparation that goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. When coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles—due to common colds—hang on, get a bottle of Creomulsion from your druggist, use it as directed and if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained, the druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief that you want. 2. "IT WAS A KNOCKOUT in a different sense! Imagine shouting your 'I do's' above the noise of a truck... and imagine going through such a scene not once, but 30 different times before all the mechanical details were right! Yet, even after this unusual throat strain...

3. "I STILL ENJOYED MY LUCKIES! In fact, Luckies are always gentle to my throat. Others at the RKO-Radio studios agree with me on this—Barbara Stanwyck and Herbert Marshall, for example." (Reason: the exclusive "Toasting" process takes out certain throat irritants found in all tobacco.)

4. "NOW AS REGARDS TOBACCO... The flavor of Luckies has always appealed to me so much, I simply concluded they must be made of better tobacco. So I was very much interested to read recently that Luckies are the favorite cigarette with the tobacco experts themselves."

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over—because you are carrying too much fat—do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" sets in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat this condition by feeding this gland the substance it lacks—and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets contain the same element prescribed by most doctors in treating their fat patients. So don't waste your time or money striving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know just what you are taking. Don't wait—get a box of Marmola today from your druggist.

The Washington Post

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Several hundred people will dine at the White House this winter, perhaps a thousand. . . . Most of them will be official Washingtonians. . . . Quite a few will come from a distance to break bread with the President and the First Lady, and take the train home next day.

* * * *

They arrive a few minutes before 8 o'clock, at the downstairs east entrance, across the street from the Treasury. A curved canvas canopy shelters them from the weather as they unload. They leave their wraps with attendants in the rooms off the lower corridor familiar to tourists.

* * * *

Here each man receives an envelope containing the name of the lady he is to take in to dinner, who will sit next to him, and a diagram showing their places at the table. . . . They go up the stairs to the main floor, where a military aide, a young officer chosen for handsome appearance, offers the lady his arm and escorts her to the door of the East Room. Her husband follows at a dignified gait.

At the door of the great East room the guests are audibly announced, and another aide introdues dinner partners and escorts the lady to her place (behind her husband) in the line in order of rank. When all the guests are in line the band in the front hall strikes up "Hail to the Chief" and the President and Mrs. Roosevelt come to their places just inside the door of the East Room, at 8 o'clock.

* * * *

Despite the necessary precedence and formality, the atmosphere is genuinely democratic . . . The President's aide presents the guests in turn as the line files past to shake the hosts' hands, consulting occasionally an unobtrusive list in his palm.

* * * *

Frequently the President recognizes the next man in line and greets him jovially by his first name, and the aide's introduction becomes unnecessary . . . After shaking hands the guests form another line, ushered by the aides, with their dinner partners, in the order they are to enter the dining room. There are no drinks before dinner.

* * * *

By 8:15 the handshaking is usually over, and the President leads the way through the long hall to the state dining room at the other end, escorting the wife of the ranking male guest, who is escorting Mrs. Roosevelt. . . . The Roosevelts sit down promptly so the guests can sit down without any stiff waiting behind their chairs.

* * * *

Service is prompt and swift, with one servant for each three or four guests, or around 22 passing food and changing plates for a dinner of 80 . . . Clear soup, fish with shrimp sauce, tomatoes, chicken, vegetables, salad, ice cream and bonbons follow in swift succession, a typical menu, while the band plays softly down the hall.

* * * *

The table is horseshoe shaped, with the President sitting at the center of the outer rim. Mrs. Roosevelt facing him from the center of the inner side, and guests in order of rank on both sides and at the ends. . . . All the food is offered to the guests, who help themselves, except the soup.

* * * *

The silverware is gold-plated; this was done during the Hoover Administration. . . . They are at the table about an hour, when Mrs. Roosevelt leads the ladies to the Green Room for coffee while the men linger in the dining room for coffee and cigars. . . . Two very light wines have been served; no hard liquor or liqueurs.

* * * *

In a quarter hour or so the men rejoin the ladies, searching out their dinner partners in the Green Room and escorting them to chairs facing the gilded piano in the East Room . . . Meanwhile, 200 or 300 guests have arrived for the after-dinner musicale; the President greets them at the East Room door and then sits down in the front row, chatting with those around him, waving to friends. Programs have been distributed.

* * * *

A distinguished pianist and a famous soprano play and sing a few numbers. . . . When the music is over the President retires to his suite upstairs; it is about 10:20. . . . Formerly he bade guests goodby, unlike previous Presidents who withdrew with their wives promptly at 10 o'clock.

* * * *

Now punch and cakes are served, and the guests begin to leave, as soon as the ranking guest departs. . . . Mrs. Roosevelt, who has remained behind, bids her guests goodnight with little if any more formality than the hostess at any large party . . . The company has broken up into little friendly groups over the frappe and cakes. . . . Before 11 o'clock most of them are well on their way home. . . . A good many of them can't remember for the life of 'em what they ate for dinner.

New House Offices Filled With Smoke From Cellar Fire

Late-working representatives and their secretaries fled their offices last night when smoke from a fire in the sub-basement filled the fireproof new House Office Building near the Capitol.

The fire started—apparently from spontaneous combustion—in insulating material. James Goodall, 35, of 1705 Capitol avenue northeast, an attendant in the heating room, and John T. Baker, 50, of 1043 North Daniel street, Arlington, Va., mechanical operator turned chemicals and water on the flames while Edward Boyle, 29, of 1835 Third street northeast, Goodall's assistant, summoned firemen.

Legal Basis For D. C. Aid Body Asked

Other Welfare Group Chiefs State Needs to Social Council.

A law which would legally establish a Public Assistance Division is one of three fundamental needs that must be faced in planning a permanent public assistance program for the District, Director Margaret Hill, of that division stated yesterday.

Addressing the Council of Social Agencies, Miss Hill stated that the Commissioners and the Board of Public Welfare have designated the Public Assistance Division to administer relief appropriations but the department "has no legal status as yet."

"A long-time program of assistance to the aged, aid to dependent children and others should have its roots in a permanent division under the Board of Public Welfare, rather than in an appropriation bill," she said.

The three fundamental needs upon which a permanent public assistance program should be based, Miss Hill stated, are:

1. Acceptance of the philosophy that a public relief program is responsible for granting assistance to those in need, regardless of whether or not those applying are able to wark, as well as to those eligible for assistance under the social security law.

2. Recognition of the necessity for adequate social services in administration of public assistance.

3. A basic law, establishing a Public Assistance Division and outlining its responsibilities.

"Recent publicity regarding the budget for the next fiscal year shows the general relief fund may be reduced by more than 30 per cent," Miss Hill stated.

1,000 Families Endangered.

"The bill as it now stands would care for only 1,000 families a month, if their relief averaged $25 per family, while with present restricted funds, over 2,000 families are being assisted. If such an appropriation were passed there obviously must be a much more limited program this year," she said.

Other heads of institutions under the Board of Public Welfare addressed the Council, each pointing out needs of the divisions.

Grady H. Leonard, superintendent of the Receiving Home, proposed a new building, to include a gymnasium, approximately 45 beds and a play yard.

Leonard also stressed that several subsidized foster homes should be available for care of small dependent children.

Industrial School "Obsolete."

Earl W. Cassie, superintendent of the Industrial Home School, termed his institution "as obsolete as a 1914 automobile." He recommended moving the institution to District-owned property at Muirkirk, Md., now occupied by the CCC.

Additional teachers, a case-worker, and a larger maintenance appropriations were recommended by Wendell P. Tucker, superintendent of the Industrial Home School for Colored Children, for his institution.

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School, at Laurel, Md., stressed the need for an Industrial School Building, an adequate laundry and proper quarters for the staff and other personnel for this institution.

Miss A. Patricia Morss, chief of the child welfare division, stated three needs of this department. These are:

1. Legal provision for study and service to neglected children without present prerequisites of commitment and court appearance.

2. Mental hygiene service of its own to include suitable living arrangements for children requiring study.

3. Immediate addition of ten social service workers with experience and technical training to the present group to help the 1,850 children now under care.

Jail Called Unhealthy.

At present any inmate in the D. C. Jail is or may be exposed to venereal, tubercular or other infection, Superintendent of Penal Institutions Ray L. Huff stated.

"The jail is over-populated," Huff said. "Vermin and contacts among diseased of all kinds exist. The physical situation makes control of these conditions difficult."

Relief can come only in part by reducing congestion, he said.

"Two new brick dormitories for women are open but the remaining women's buildings on the Reservation are fire hazards," he asserted.

Conditions at the Workhouse also need remedying, Huff added.

"The Workhouse has no sewer treatment," he said, "we are asking especially for this. We are asking for a central storehouse, which is needed on its own merits. When constructed, it will relieve other storage and commissaries to give use room for 200 more population and space for ambulant patients, with some segregation."

The Reformatory has a population now of 1,600 men, and the capacity is 1,200, Huff stated.

"Money to complete the walled division for 200 inmates is requested for 1939," he said.

Two Navy Boards Meet To Weigh Promotions

Two selection boards convened yesterday at the Navy Department, one to recommend two captains of the Medical Corps for promotion to rear admiral and the other to choose 75 lieutenant commanders for advancement to the grade of commander of the line.

Citizens Urge Parking Limit Cut to 12 Hrs.

District motorists would be limited to parking on one side of a street for a maximum of 12 hours, after which they would be forced to the other side under terms of a resolution adopted last night by the West End Citizens Association.

The association also recommended that a one-hour parking limit be enforced on Pennsylvania avenue between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets northwest and that three-car loading zones be established on each side. It was recommended that I street northwest between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets be limited to one-hour parking on the north side.

A resolution was adopted urging that all land from Third Precinct police station to Twenties street, extending the depth of the present station be purchased. The resolution recommended that a new station be built at Twentieth and K streets and the land between that and the present station be used for farmers' market space.

Fight to Congress.

The Piney Branch Citizens' Association will carry to Congress its fight for demolition of the old tuberculosis hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest to create a site for a new recreation center and Wilson Teachers College.

F. C. Merritt, chairman of a special committee to unite civic opinion for the project, told an association meeting last night that his group expected to lay its demand before the House Appropriations sub-committee this week.

His committee fears, he said, that the property never will be cleared if the building is turned over to the District Health Department for use as a convalescent ward of Gallinger Hospital.

Similar views were expressed by the Hillcrest Citizens Association at a meeting last night in a resolution proposing erection of an addition to Gallinger.

Stanton Group Agrees.

Stanton Park Citizens Association, meeting at Peabody School, adopted resolutions also opposing use of the tuberculosis hospital building by Gallinger Hospital and opposing any change in supervision of stands operated by blind persons in Government buildings.

Vigorously attacking an application to establish a liquor store in the 2700 block of Good Hope road southeast, members of the Hillcrest Citizens Association last night voted to carry the case to court if necessary.

Rudolph Malk, member of a special committee to fight the application, reported that the Alcohol Beverage Control Board had denied the license but later granted the application following a hearing. He questioned legal right of the board to reverse its original decision.

The Northeast Washington Citizens Association opposed the pending District small-loan bill and a bill to limit the number of taxicabs in the city. It approved a pending bill to include special assessments in refunds of taxes erroneously collected.

Other pending measures approved by the association were those requiring non-residents to pay tuition in District schools, proposing a farm for inebriates and substitution of a medical examiner for the present coroner.

Increase in the Federal lump-sum payment to the District was demanded by the Kalorama Citizens Association. The association adopted a resolution to that effect, but officers of the organization said it "probably won't do any good."

Privilege Tax Scored.

The Southeast Business Men's Association last night attacked the business privilege tax as "class legislation" and went on record as favoring the substitution of a sales tax to fill any deficit in the District budget.

The association also voted to oppose diversion of the gasoline tax and change in the Community Center organization system. Other resolutions expressed the appreciation for inclusion in the District budget items for a new Pennsylvania avenue bridge and for extension of Branch avenue to the District line.

Cost of 4 Items For Waitresses Fixed at Parley

Representatives of the employer and employe groups at the Minimum Wage Conference agreed yesterday on the yearly costs of four items of clothing used by female workers in the hotel, restaurant, and allied industries, for which the conference is attempting to set a legal weekly wage.

The items were raincoats, rubbers, handbags and handkerchiefs.

Both groups agreed that the women, under this classification should be permitted to purchase one raincoat every third year. On this basis, the yearly output for a raincoat would amount to $1.32.

One pair of toe rubbers, at 50 cents; 2 handbags a year, at $1 each and 12 hankerchiefs, at 10 cents each, were the other items approved by bot h groups.

Transportation was agreed upon by both groups, without any discussion. It provided for a weekly purchase of a car pass at $1.25.

Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the Minimum Wage Board, was re-elected yesterday as chairman by the members of the board. The other members of the board are, Claude H. Woodward, representing the employer group, and Arthur L. Schoenthal, representing the employe group.

Miss Gwen Keech, was reappointed secretary

Walsh Asks Tolerance In Religion

Massachusetts Senator Addresses Annual Mass Meeting Here.

Dr. Israel and Bishop Hughes Also Speak in Constitution Hall.

A plea for religious tolerance and acknowledgment of religion's importance in personal and national life was sounded last night by Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, before more than 1,500 persons in Constitution Hall.

He addressed the third annual mass meeting conducted by the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital.

Senator Walsh, the principal speaker, represented the Catholic group; Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church represented the Protestent denominations and Dr. Edward L. Israel, Baltimore rabbi, represented the Jewish faith.

Condemns Restraints.

Walsh declared religious liberty the outstanding heritage brought to us through the centuries of mankind's progress. Saying that in the United States this meant a guarantee of no civil interference with worship, he pointed out that, to preserve the true spirit of religious freedom, no one religious body should seek to restrain another in any way.

Citing the suppression of religion in the Soviet and the persecution of religion in Nazi Germany, the Massachusetts Senator declared that "wherever religion lies crushed today, tyranny is enthroned."

While, he said, the United States is not threatened with the loss of religious fredom, yet "candor compels us to admit that we are suffering from a substantial loss of religion." Statistics showed, he said, that an increasing percentage of college students are unbelievers and indicate that during the past 20 years anti-religious instruction has seeped down from the colleges to the secondary schools."

Bishop Hughes warned that materialistic interests were likely to prevail over the spiritual life in all political capitals. Then, too, he said, politics is apt to be accompanied by an extensive social life which may endanger religious observances.

Newcomers Welcomed.

Dr. Israel declared that in the Capital "there must be a dramatic, eloquent expression of the realization that democracy cannot live without faith." Democracy and religion, he asserted, are similar in that each recognizes only the supremacy of the Divine force.

The Rev. Albert J. McCartney, chairman of the committee on religious life, explained to the audience that a particular purpose of the organization was to extend a welcome to newcomers to the city and to help those with roots elsewhere enjoy religious affiliations here. His welcome was echoed by Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, secretary of the committee.

Benediction was given by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, who earlier in the evening had issued an appeal for funds to defray the committee's expenses.

The Rev. Edgar A. Love, president of the Interdenominational Ministers' Alliance, read the Scripture from the thirty-fifth chapter of Isaiah. The Rev. Robert T. Workman, chief of the Chaplain's Division of the Navy, offered the opening prayer, while responsive reading from Psalm 19 was led by the Rev. James S. Montgomery, Chaplain of the House.

Music was furnished by the Army Band and by Edwin Steffe, barytone soloist at Washington Cathedral. Steffe was accompanied by Robert Barrow, Washington Cathedral organist.

D. C. Armory Site Cost May Increase

Testimony that the $210,000 recommended by the Budget Bureau for the purchase of a District National Guard Armory site might not be sufficient was given to the House sub-committee on District appropriations yesterday.

Because of recent building in the vicinity of the south end of East Capitol street, it was said, the site might cost as much as $400,000.

The sub-committee studied estimates of the sewer, fire and traffic departments, along with those of the Zoo and the District militia during the day. The hearing will not be resumed until 1:30 p. m. today as Auditor Daniel J. Donovan has been called before the House sub-committee on local taxes.

Mercury Drops to 23; Rain, Warmer Today

Coldest weather of the season was recorded yesterday at 6 a. m., when the mercury dipped to 23 degrees—just six above the record established 'way back in 1937, when the thermometer registered 17 on December 12.

Slowly rising temperatures were forecast for today, however, and Weather Bureau officials predicted a low of about 32, with clouds and possible rain late tonight.

Leaders Attend Meeting on Religion in National Life

Post Staff Photos.

Branch Urges Gravelly Point For D.C. Airport

Postal Aide Stresses Traffic Benefits of Field Near City.

Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, last night entered the local airport fight by placing himself on record in favor of the Gravelly Point site for Washington's future superterminal.

Branch made his position known in a letter to Allen W. Smythe, secretary of the Aero Club of Washington, who had asked him the Post-office's official position toward two airports—one two miles from the center of the city, the other eleven.

Gravelly Point—two miles from the city—has "a most decided advantage," Branch wrote, emphasizing that a matter of a few minutes is often of vital importance to air mail and passengers in making train connections.

Throughout his letter, made public by Chester H. Warrington, president of the Aero Club, Branch mentioned "traffic conditions," evidently referring to the possibility of traffic problems occasioned by military planes landing at nearby Bolling Field and Anacostia Naval Air Station.

Branch's letter was made public at the annual meeting of the Aero Club of Washington, held last night at the National Aeronautic Association headquarters at Dupont Circle. The club again voiced support of Gravelly Point.

New officers elected were: John Victory, secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, president; Capt. Corley McDarment, Air Corps, retired, first vice president; Mrs. Mary F. Benson, second vice president; John S. Wynne, formerly of the Bureau of Air Commerce, now an attorney, third vice president; Allen W. Smythe, re-elected secretary, and J. F. Peters, of the Bureau of Standards, treasurer; Chester H. Warrington, Dr. George W. Lewis, research director for the N. A. C. A.; Louis W. Inwood, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. M. Lillian Prinz, trustees.

Marriage License Check Bounces—He Bounces in Jail

Love will find a way—but Alexander H. Heron, 35, chose the wrong way when he paid for his marriage license with a check that bounced.

Heron was arraigned in Police Court yesterday on three false representation charges in connection with $60 worth of bogus checks. Judge Hobart Newman sentenced him to spend the next 180 days of his honeymoon in the District Jail.

Alexandria, Va., authorities appeared in court and testified Heron had obtained a marriage license there Christmas Eve and had given the court clerk a bad check for $3.

"I must have been doped or something when I gave those checks," Heron said to Judge Newman after sentence had been passed.

Federal Bar Group Urges More Police

Lawyer Cites Sen. Borah's Charge District Is Crime Capital.

Urging adoption of Maj. Ernest Brown's recommendation that 107 men be added to the Metropolitan Police force, members of the executive council of the Federal Bar Association last night directed William R. Vallance, chairman of the legislative committee, to communicate with Representative Ross Collins and request authorizatoin of the increase.

Calling members' attention to Senator Borah's recent statement that Washington was "the second, if not the greatest, criminal capital in the world," Vallance attacked the Commissioners' recommendation that 31 officers be added to the force as "insufficient to handle the District's crime problem." Only seven police clerks were allowed by the Budget Bureau in its recommendations to Congress.

The council also approved Maj. Brown's suggestion that the present Second Precinct be divided into two precincts, using the Women's Bureau as quarters for the new precinct. Under the plan, the Women's Bureau would be moved into the old Police Court Building.

A bill now pending in the House prohibiting public photographing and publication of vital Army and Navy installations and equipment was indorsed by the council following a debate as to whether the problem was one coming within the scope of the association.

The meeting, attended by members representing virtually every Government agency in Washington, was presided over by Horace Russell, president and general counsel for the H. O. L. C.

Rumania Lawyers Defy Ban on Jews

Bucharest, Jan. 10 (U.P.).—The Rumanian Bar Association tonight defied the anti-Semitric program of Premier Octavian Goga by refusing to take action which would lead to disbarment of more than 1,500 Jewish lawyers.

The action, taken by the chamber of lawyers executive committee, came as Goga announced in an interview with a correspondent of the Paris newspaper le Journal that he plans to expel more than 500,000 Jews—more than half of the Jews in Rumania—from the country.

General Hines Speaks Before Veterans Here

Administrator Asks Strong National Defense in Address to D.A.V.

Indorsement of a strong national defense program and a plea for adherence to principles of Americanism were advanced last night by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator, in a talk at the Hotel Harrington.

Gen. Hines, guest of honor at a dinner of the District Department of Disabled American Veterans, said that a strong army and navy would enable the United States to lead the way to world peace. He pointed to the need of Americanism for development of good citizenship. In this development, veterans who stood the acid test of the World War should lead, he said.

Gen. Hines warned that a serious employment problem exists for many veterans. According to the recent unemployment census, nearly 300,000 veterans are unemployed, he said. He reviewed progress of the hospitalization program for disabled veterans and said that at present 82 hospital units are caring for more than 54,000 veterans.

Extension of the unemployment problem to disabled veterans of the District was pointed out by E. Claude Babcock, past national commander of the D. A. V. During the past four months, he said, there has been a trend away from employing such veterans as guards in public buildings here.

The following new officers were installed at the banquet: John T. Chedester, department commander; Amos K. Heimer, senior vice commander; Mr. Herman Downey, junior vice commander, and Earl G. Hendrick, adjutant-treasurer.

Lunch Fund Benefit Plan Is Dropped

Mrs. Boyle Says 'Country Store' Abandoned for Time Being.

Velvet Ball and Other Audits Due to Be Finished Soon.

Plans for a "country store" benefit to help feed needy school children in Washington were abandoned yesterday for the time being, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the citizens' permanent committee for the lunch fund, announced.

With the outcome of the Velvet Ball still undetermined pending completion of a financial report, Mrs. Boyle said the plans of the committee do not at present provide for any future benefits. Emphasis will be placed on the "silent guest" campaign of collections in stores and restaurants and on the sale of health bonds, she said.

Audit Due Shortly.

Mrs. Boyle's announcement coincided with a statement released yesterday by Joseph Marshall, director of the Better Business Bureau. He said "the Better Business Bureau feels that it is not proper for benefit affairs to expend, in solicitation and promotional costs, sums altogether out of proportion with the monies to be raised for actual charity.

Both Mrs. Boyle and Marshall expressed eagerness yesterday to determine the results of the Velvet Ball and the present financial status of the children's lunch fund.

Mrs. Boyle said that an audit showing the whole financial picture of the lunch fund, "from the first dollar obtained by the committee to the last dollar spent to date" would be completed this week. She said the committee was anxious to issue its report, and that the audit was being completed as rapidly as possible by a certified public accountant.

Full Publicity Asked.

Marshall, whose investigation of the Velvet Ball arrangements last month, preceded retirement of the managing director, Jay F. Corbett, stated "it is the bureau's belief that business men and members of the public who are solicited for charitable purposes are entitled to a full knowledge of the expenses and overhead costs incidental to the raising of the money, and also to an understanding of how and for what the money will be expended."

Mrs. Boyle pointed out that the forthcoming report would include an audit of the funds collected and expended by the emergency committee which took up the job of feeding needy school children early last fall and which formed the basis for the present incorporated committee.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visions Woman as New Justice

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said yesterday that she could see "no reason" why the President should not appoint a woman to the Supreme Court to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Justice George Sutherland.

Although declining to predict what her husband will do, and refusing to mention any candidate for the job, Mrs. Roosevelt is known to be an admirer of United States Circuit Judge Florence E. Allen, of Ohio, who became the first woman to sit on a Federal bench when Mr. Roosevelt appointed her in 1934.

National Farce Hits New High Of Lunatic Fun

'If I Were You,' Defies Classification Among Normal Comedies.

By Nelson B. Bell

"IF I WERE YOU." Paul Hervey Fox presents a new farce in three acts and six scenes by himself and Benn W. Levy, suggested by a novel by Thorne Smith. Directed by Mr. Levy; settings by Raymond Sovey. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Arthur Blunt	Bernard Lee
Miss Haller	Mona Moray
Nora	Betty Field
Helena Batty	Janet Hill
Nellie Blunt	Constance Cummings
Kenneth Batty	Harold Vermilyea
Cook	Marie de Becker
Maxie Maybrick	Irving Morrow
A Constable	John M. O'Connor
Dr. Alexander	J. Malcolm Dunn

It was a carnival of lunacy that was unveiled in the National Theater last night.

Those genial gentlemen of the theater, the Messrs. Paul Hervey Fox and Benn W. Levy, the first the producer, the second the director and the two coauthors of "If I Were You," evidently are a little bored by the serious projects of the proscenium and feel that the traditional playhouse needs, above all else, a copious injection of ribald insanity.

To the best of their ample abilities they have supplied the crying need of a lethargic theatrical season in their collaboration for the amiable starring purposes of Constance Cummings, seen earlier in the season on the same stage in the title role of the Theater Guild's production of Mr. Levy's English adaptation of Flaubert's crimson drama of "Madame Bovary." The result may be conservatively appraised as a field day of high-flown hilarity, nonsensical "situations" and idiocy triumphant.

No Basis of Comparison.

There is no comparative basis upon which to found a judgment of the possible public acclaim that may accrue to this fantastic farce. There never has been anything quite like it in the exercise of the footlights' undisputed privilege of exploring new avenues of dubious humor and plumbing new depths of imaginative frivolity.

The whole thing has its crazy genesis in the scientific efforts of a young practitioner of the test tubes and retorts of the laboratory to attain a reversal of the sexes by biochemical processes. The investigative first act is a little slow-footed as these abstruse experiments are put under way. An Irish slavey, daughter of an avowed "witch," furnishes the keynote of the subsequent developments by expressing a confident mistrust of the value of the experiments being conducted by Arthur Blunt, almost before they are started. Her premonitions are abundantly borne out by the later revelations of the three acts.

The earnest and profound Mr. Blunt is able—like the prestidigitator who can take a rabbit out of his hat, but can't put him back again—to confuse the genders of his personal establishment without apprehending the formula for restoring his wife to femininity and himself to the roosutious qualities of vigorous manhood. There is vast amusement and a subtly sinister implication in much that ensues after Mr. Blunt becomes "Mrs." and his wife assumes the masculine attributes of "the man of the house."

There is such an inexhaustible field of comic effect opened by this bizarre device that one wonders if Mr. Fox and Mr. Levy have chosen from the wealth of provocative material before them the most sagacious aids to their frank intention of providing an evening of meaningless and inconsequential entertainment. They garner laughs by the carload, along with a reasonable shipment of raised eyebrows and a small cargo of wonderment that such brilliant authorial talents should have been bestowed upon so trivial an enterprise. After all, when it is all over, what have you?

Last evening the answer was a half dozen curtain calls, roars of laughter and an agreeable inclination on the part of the audience to accept "If I Were You" as a harmless frolic they had taken in on an off night and been innocuously taken in by.

Boasts Versatile Star.

The piece serves at least one useful function. It demonstrates again something that already was pretty generally known by the initiate of the theater—that Constance Cummings is a young actress of conspicuous charm and engaging versatility. "If I Were You" is a far cry, as the saying goes, from "Madame Bovary." The feathery weight of the opus is about evenly divided between her strong shoulders and those of Bernard Lee, imported from London to play the part of the pseudo "Nellie" Blunt. Both bear up well under the elderdown burden—Miss Cummings rather better than Mr. Lee, since she is the one who has to bear him on her back during some of the comedy's most extraordinary moments of cockeyed action and turns the trick with the seeming ease of a "ground man" in an acrobatic act.

Mr. Lee is a personable young fellow who has the casual British penchant for doing uncommonly extravagant things seriously and thus adding to the sum total of a nonsensical play's impressiveness—if any.

The supporting players are all that a play of this nature might reasonably demand in the way of flippant and friendly interpretation. Notable in the ensemble is Harold Vermilyea, who also was seen with Miss Cummings in "Madame Bovary." He laughs himself to success in a laughable role. Others who do likewise include Betty Field, as Nora, the clairvoyant servant girl; Marie de Becker, as an harrassed cook in a topsy-turvy household; Janet Hill, Irving Morrow and J. Malcolm Dunn, who had a bit of arthritis, or something, that was remedied by a curative explosion.

One hesitates to forecast the future of "If I Were You." You either like it or you don't. A purely personal notion maintains a strictly 50-50 neutrality. But at times it probably was this typewriter that you heard laughing above al the rest of the first-night audience!

Vacation Planned.

George Burns and Gracie Allen, accompanied by Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone, plan a trip to Europe shortly after the release of the present Burns and Allen film, "College Swing." Both the Burns couple and the Bennys intend to take their children with them. They expect to be away from Hollywood for three months.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

One of the City's Major Charitable Organizations Girds for Another Fruitful Year of Vital Service

THE VARIETY CLUB OF WASHINGTON, the foremost organization of showmen the Capital ever has been able to boast, held its induction of officers for the new year last Friday night.

BELL.

A. Julian Brylawski is the new Chief Barker, succeeding Carter Barron, divisional manager of Loew's, Inc. Mr. Brylawski is one of Washington's pioneer theater men, having long been identified with his father, the late "Daddy" Brylawski, in the conduct of the old Cosmos Theater and being, futhermore, one of the founders of the present Earle Theater, first projected as the Cosmopolitan, preserving at least a syllable or two of the name of the original Brylawski playhouse that introduced so many eminents to the theatergoing public of this city.

Mr. Brylawski already has named the standing committees of Variety for the period of his incumbency of the presidency—disguised by the term of "Chief Barker" in the picturesque patois of "show business." They are as follows:

Executive committee: Chairman, A. E. Lichtman, who will be associated with the former chief barkers of the club; John J. Payette, Carter Barron, J. Louis Rome and Sam Galanty.

Sidney Lust was named chairman of the finance committee, which will include J. Louis Rome and Sam Flax, who has rattled down the halls of fame as first "manager" of his boyhood friend, Al Jolson.

The house committee will be under the chairmanship of Dr. Archie Engel and will include Joseph Makover, Joseph P. Morgan, Kemp Mohler and Joe Kaliski.

Membership committee: Sam Wheeler, chairman; Fred Rohrs, Alan Backrach, Clarke Davis and Eddie Heiber.

Ways and means: Sam Flax, chairman; Archie Engel and Joseph P. Morgan.

These appointments embrace the cream of the show world's executives representing the most important theatrical interests in the country in Washington.

They are important to the community life of the Capital because the Variety Club, aside from its social activities, primarily is a factor in the charitable forces of the Capital of the Nation that cannot easily be laughed aside. Variety's contributions to worthy causes have formed a notable chapter in humanitarian work during the past year and the club in the short period of its existence has taken its place in the forefront of local agencies with a definite purpose of relief for the underprivileged and succor for the needy.

It is interesting to note in this connection that the annual report of Rudolph Berger, chairman of the welfare committee, records the expenditure of $8,217.36 during the 12 months just closed for the amelioration of suffering and the introduction of a little of the joy of living into lives that otherwise would have been utterly destitute. That is creeping up on an average expenditure of $10,000 a year—$200 a week, which is not a negligible figure in any man's arithmetic. All of this suggests the fact that the Variety Club is one of the most reliable instruments of needed relief now functioning in Washington. Its disbursements are made from funds which it has raised by rigidly organized promotion of social, civic and sports events that have set new records for economy of operation and substantial net returns. Fly-by-night racketeering that fattens private pockets and leaves the objects of its "charities" holding the bag has no place in Variety's scheme of things. Washington is increasingly becoming aware of this happy circumstance.

• • • •

Washingtonians who had anticipated the presence of Cecil B. De Mille, noted motion picture producer and director, at the "sneak" preview of "The Buccaneer," at Loew's Palace on Thursday night of this week, are in for a bit of disappointment.

Mr. De Mille, it seems, has suddenly discovered that he will be unable to be present in Washington on Thursday, for reasons which he no doubt deems conclusive. He makes the protestation that of all the cities on his tentative itinerary, Washington was the one he most wished to visit—very pretty, but he won't be here.

Well, as I have remarked so many times before, life is like that!

• • • •

Miss Eleanor Springman, among numerous others, has written this desk in mild excitement and considerable anxiety over the exact nature of the preview of "The Buccaneer"—will the prices be tilted skyward, will "The Hurricane" also be on view that night, etc., etc.? For the comfort of these anxious souls, it may be set down, with the authority of the Loew management to back it up, that prices will not be changed for this special occasion; "The Hurricane" will be shown and, altogether, it is an amusement bargain that is being tossed into the lap of Washington. The only deviation from normal practice on Thursday night will be interruption of the regular program at approximately 9 o'clock to permit a single screening of "The Buccaneer." Thus, for those who care for so much elaborated entertainment at a single sitting, the thing resolves itself into a matter of two major features for the price of one. So now you know—I hope.

• • • •

In fulfillment of prophesies made here many days ago, Sonja Henie, one of the outstanding "discoveries" of the year in films, will arrive in Washington, at the airport, tomorrow afternoon at 2:20.

Miss Henie, the wizard of sharpened blades on ice, is not making a "personal appearance tour," but comes to Washington at the behest of her government to receive exceptional royal decorations at the Embassy. The Twentieth Century-Fox star, so local manager Sam Wheeler tells me, will be the fifth woman in the history of the citation to be made the recipient of the particular royal accolade with which she is to be honored.

• • • •

A pleasant message from Eddie Dowling, producer of "Shadow and Substance," at the National last week with Sir Cedric Hardwicke starred and Julie Haydon leading the support, conveys hearty appreciation of the enthusiasm with which the press of the Capital received his latest contribution to the rehabilitation of the living drama. He gives assurance that his next play will be accorded its first presentation on any stage here, in token of his awareness of Washington's discriminating judgment of theatrical values and willingness to support attractions of the worthier sort. If he can continue in the groove of "Richard II" and "Shadow and Substance," there will be no limit to his welcome back any time he can contrive to arrange it.

• • • •

On the letterhead of the Lichtman Theaters in the Capital comes the announcement that the world premiere of "The Spirit of Youth," starring world heavyweight champion Joe Louis, has been set for the Lincoln Theater in this city on Thursday night, January 20. The champion himself will appear in person in conjunction with first showing of the first feature film in which he ever has been starred.

Mr. Lichtman, one is led to believe, outbid many larger cities—Chicago, New York and Detroit, among others—to bring the premiere here.

The picture is being heralded as the finest feature of the Negro race ever filmed; the first production of its kind ever to be selected by a national organization for general distribution and exhibition. Grand National Pictures, of which Harry Brown is local manager, sponsor "The Spirit of Youth." They were the distributors, also of "Something to Sing About," the recent Hollywood musical that brought Jimmy Cagney back to the screen after too long an absence.

• • • •

It came true. Last week the estimable Col. James Jeremiah Lake, which, needless to say, isn't his right name, relinquished managerial control of the Gayety Theater. The Ninth street palace of pulchritude now is under the personal guidance of Izzy Hirst, president of the burlesque wheel of which it forms so important a part. The house is under the personal management of William Collins, formerly Western representative of the Hirst interests. Jimmy, heaven be praised, will continue as supervisor of production and staging of the units playing the house over which he so long has presided as one of the foremost practitioners of his calling. Good luck to all and sundry—especially Jimmy.

There's-Many-a-Slip Note.

This was to have been a short column, but anyone can make a mistake!

Imported for New Comedy Role

BERNARD LEE,

young English player, who was brought to this country by Paul Hervey Fox, producer, and Benn W. Levy, coauthor, to appear in the leading role opposite Constance Cummings in their new farce, "If I Were You," revealed for the first time in Washington in the National Theater last night. This is Miss Cummings' second appearance of the season in the National Capital, her first having been in the title role of "Madame Bovary."

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Jan. 10.

Star teams are the surest money-makers in Hollywood. Bill Powell and Myrna Loy—as a duo—are far more popular than either one is alone. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers consort with one another as harmoniously as bread and butter, while Fred, on his own for the first time in "Damsel in Distress," comes too close a cropper for comfort. MacMurray and Lombard, Laurel and Hardy, MacDonald and Eddy—those are all names to conjure with—as long as they are linked on the theater marquees. Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell—as a team—were worth millions. After they were separated, Janet went into a decline and Charles vanished from the screen.

• • • •

The priceless ingredient in every such combination seems to be personal harmony between the costars. Gaynor and Farrell were in love, consequently their love scenes were believable and appealing. All of the other great team combinations have been based on personal friendship.

• • • •

And that is exactly why I cannot understand the continued teaming of Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond. Ann is a grand little actress; Gene, to the majority of fans, is an appealing personality. Either one, alone, would have a chance to reach the top. Together, they are a dismal loss. I do not profess to know their reasons, but they dislike one another more thoroughly than any two costars in screen history. Keeping them together comes under the general heading of senseless cruelty.

• • • •

Today, sitting in the Twentieth Century-Fox cafe, I watched the parade of the extra girls and bit girls. Somewhere in the background an orchestra should have been playing "The Wedding of the Painted Doll." Some are blondes, some are brunettes, a few are redheads; some are short, some are tall, some are neither short nor tall—but each wears the same make-up, the same style of dress and the same general atmosphere of artificiality. They look like nothing so much as mannikins stamped out by a machine. While we watched, one of the studio's scenarists and I tried to decide why they all conformed to a single pattern . . . and gave up the task after making a few minor observations. For one thing, each one plucks her eyebrows in exactly the same "exotic" fashion and, as a result, each one has an expression of wide-eyed surprise.

• • • •

When Sonja Henie and Tyrone Power—until a few weeks ago the most publicized sweethearts in Hollywood—meet in the studio cafe, a hush settles over the room. Everyone leans forward and does everything but cup an ear in the effort to hear any conversation between them. We are not really romantic, but, by heaven, we are the most curious, interfering, gossip-minded people that ever lived. But every day the meeting occurs—and every day we have listened in vain for sensation. Tyrone said "hello" and Sonja said "hello"—nothing more. However, we find consolation in the fact that Sonja Henie gets into that "hello" the temperature of an Arctic blizzard.

• • • •

Maxie Rosenbloom is a boxer, not an actor—but since he spends most of his time in Hollywood, and since he is at least as "screwy" as most of the actors he pals around with, he should be eligible for mention here. The other day he was telling me about one of the numerous "downs" in his hectic career. Seems he has employed a chauffeur, at $40 a week for four years. Suddenly Maxie found himself flat broke, so he summoned his driver and asked whether he had any savings. The chauffeur admitted that he had a few hundred dollars tucked away. "Well," said Maxie, "I'll make you a sporting proposition. Since you're the rich man of this establishment, suppose you hire me, at 40 a week, as your chauffeur, until I can catch up." And that is what they did.

Coast Studios Forecast More Film Comedies

Movie audiences of the world have just begun to laugh, according to Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, who last week broke his rule against interviews to forecast more and funnier comedies on Hollywood's production schedule for 1938.

The coming year, as Balaban sees it, will be featured by a speeding up of the current trend toward the dizzy, slap-stick type of screenplay, exemplified by such pictures as "True Confession" and "The Awful Truth."

The end of this cycle was predicted more than a year ago, the film executive pointed out, yet each new picture of the "screwy" type seems to draw bigger and more enthusiastic crowds than the last.

All other types of comedies, many of them musicals, also will continue strong through 1938, according to Balaban, who, in addition to heading a big producing company also is the operator of a big Midwestern theater chain and is therefore in a position to maintain a close check on public taste in movies.

More and more comedy is being placed on the studios' production schedules, he pointed out. In production at Paramount alone at the present time are three million-dollar comedies for 1938 release—"Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," starring Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper; "Doctor Rhythm," starring Bing Crosby and the famous English comedienne, Beatrice Lillie, and "Professor Beware," a Harold Lloyd production. Several other comedies—notably "The Big Broadcast of 1938"—are in the cutting rooms.

Also of prime importance on Hollywood's 1938 program, according to the film executive, will be stories of early American history of the outdoor spectacle sort typified by "Wells Fargo," Paramount's epic of American frontiers soon to be released.

Straight gangster melodramas, which once made fortunes for film producers, will be relegated almost exclusively to the program picture, since the public apparently has lost much of its interest in the subject, according to Balaban.

Old-fashioned "tear-jerkers" will be extremely rare and pictures of a political or social theme will be almost entirely missing from the '38 schedules, in the opinion of the Paramount chief.

New York, Jan. 10.

DARRYL ZANUCK and Joe Schenck purchased an oil well recently, and Sid Grauman, owner of the Chinese Theater in Hollywood, joined the purchasing syndicate . . . The well came in, and produces almost 100 barrels a week . . . Wednesday night, when Winthrop Aldrich—on behalf of the Chase National Bank—tendered a dinnr to Zanuck, Grauman was seated between Nelson Rockefeller and John D. Rockefeller, jr. He sat down, turned to Nelson, then to John, and said: "Y'know—I'm in the oil business, too."

• • • •

GRAUMAN is a practical joker. When an epidemic in Los Angeles resulted in a municipal ruling banning people from assembling in halls or theaters, the owner of a musee stored his wax figures in the basement of Grauman's theater . . . Another theater owner complained about the ban to Sid, who promised to gather the city officials at an upstairs room in the Chinese Theater—and let the complainant relate to them his grievances. The wax figures were placed around the table in that darkened room, and Grauman instructed the theater owner: "Walk right in and start talking" . . . Walk in he did, banged the table to emphasize a remark—and Lincoln's head fell off!

Tuesday night pickets, as they had done since the show opened, gathered in front of the Martin Beck Theater, and picketed "Barchester Towers" all night long. They didn't know that the show had closed the night before.

Bassin Stars For Hoyas in Easy Victory

Deadly Shooting of Blue and Gray Too Much for Owl Cagers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Playing a two-fisted brand of basketball, Georgetown's amazing basketball team chalked up a decisive 39-22 victory over an even more amazed Temple quintet last night at College Park. It was both teams initial Eastern Conference engagement.

The high-powered Owls, who only last week routed Stanford, wonder team of the Pacific Coast, so-called, couldn't cope with their opponents' close-guarding tactics and accurate shooting. Georgetown led at the half, 24-12, and won going away.

Left-handed Harry Bassin, veteran forward, paced the Blue and Gray to victory with a half dozen field goals and foul for 13 points. He played one of his best games in leading the way to victory. But you can't overlook the sterling support rendered by his mates.

Entire Team Stars.

There was little Tommy Nolan, smallest man on the floor, a mite among giants, directing the attack; Hank Bertrand whose defensive play was above reproach; "Big Mike" Petroskey, the old reliable, plucking errant shots off the back board like a magnet; Joe Murphy, Ed Kurtyka, Don Schmidt—well all of 'em starred.

Georgetown drew first blood as Bassin pocketed his first two filed goals of the fray, and then stretched it's advantage to 13-1 before the astounded visitors realized they had a fight on their hands. Thirteen and a half minutes elapsed before Boyle sent Temple's first field goal spinning through the hoop, and the Owls were held to four double-deckers in the first period.

Georgetown, meanwhile, was working plays and getting the ball under the backboard for numerous easy shots which it never failed to convert. It was bertrand, Bassin, Petrosky, Bertrand Kurtyka in an unceasing parade. Few times did the Hoyas gamble on long shots, so well did the two execute their assignments.

Temple Trailed at Half.

The half ended with Temple trailing, 24-12, but the Owls set about correcting this as the final period opened. Boyle scored twice and Black once as they pared Georgetown's lead to 6 points, 24-18. Bassin interrupted the spree with a southpaw shot, but this was offset by Shields' long one, and a point-forpoint- stretch battle appeared imminent.

But Temple's scoring eye was completely blinded by the Hoyas' close defensive tactics at this juncture, and it was held well in hand over the remainder of the route. Georgetown, with Murphy, Schmidt and Petroskey bearing the brunt of the burden, prodded its margin to 39-20, assuring itself of victory.

In desperation the Owls resorted to long shots from mid-court but it was a futile gesture. Each errant shot usually richocheted into 2 points for the home team.

Mack Re-elected President of A's

Philadelphia, Jan. 10 (AP).—Ailing Connie Mack, who at 75 looks forward to "one more championship," was re-elected president and treasurer today of the Philadelphia Athletics Baseball Club.

All other officers also were re-elected. They are:

Roy Mack, son of Connie, vice president and secretary; Bob Schroeder, assistant secretary; Frank McFarland, assistant treasurer, and Benjamin McFarland, traveling secretary.

Mulloy and Toley Beat Grant, Hines

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP).—Gardnar Mulloy and George Toley, of the University of Miami, upset Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, and Wilmer Hines, of Hollywood, Calif., in the doubles final of the Miami Biltmore tennis tournament today.

The score was 8—6, 6—3, 3—6, 5—7, 9—7.

In the singles final yesterday Bitsy served notice he was out for a Davis Cup berth again by defeating Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, ranked second nationally.

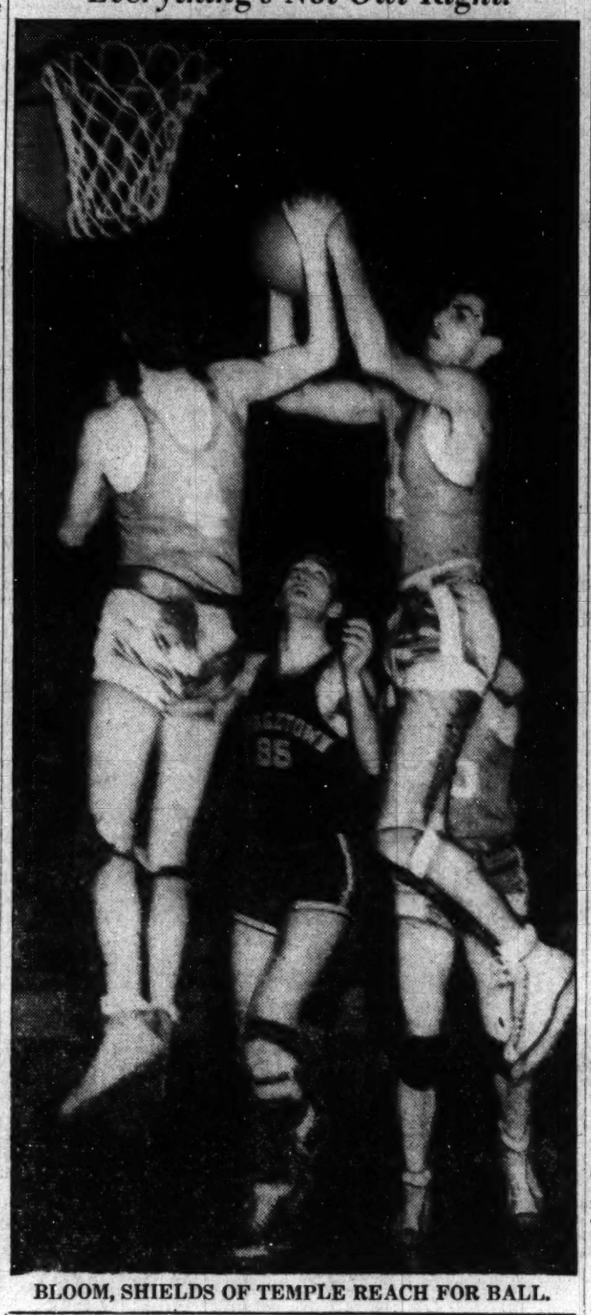
Everything's Not Owl Right!



BLOOM, SHIELDS OF TEMPLE REACH FOR BALL.

This Morning..

With Shirley Povich

The impression grows that the current crop of fight champions is as sorry a lot as ever came down the pike in a body. We wouldn't know about the good old days but if the claims on their behalf are even fairly accurate, fistic titles have fallen into the hands of cheap company almost all the way down the line.

POVICH.

Extract Featherweight Champ Henry Armstrong and Welter Champ Barney Ross from the current list of champs and the leavings are lean indeed. Starting at the top of the weight classes, with Joe Louis, an appraising eye can hardly fail to note that pugilism's titleholders do not measure up to the popular conception of fight champions who are absolute rulers of their divisions.

Louis won his title fairly enough by knocking out Jimmy Braddock, but Braddock, as a champion, was an arthritic 34-year-old hulk whose best performances were behind him in challenging roles. Louis added little luster to his crown when he permitted Bob Pastor to outgallop him for ten rounds and then had a horrible time of it winning a 15-round decision from Tapping Tommy Farr who couldn't punch his way out of a cellophane wrapper.

Qualified on Knockout.

But Louis was the author of one feat that is probably unrivaled by any heavyweight champ of bygone days. He qualified for his chance at the title by getting himself knocked out in 12 rounds by Max Schmeling. That beating will forever remain a blot on Louis' title unless he evens the score with Schmeling.

John Henry Lewis reigns as the lightheavyweight champ but nobody seems to care. The lightheavy title is an unprofitable possession and Lewis is currently threatening to abdicate and fight as a heavyweight. Lewis won the crown from washed-up Maxie Rosenbloom and in recent non-title fights has been outpointed by a couple of fistic nonentities. When Paul Berlenbach and Jack Delaney ruled the light-heavy class, the title could be translated into $200,000 gates but an $800 guarantee these days will bring John Henry Lewis a-running.

The middleweight class is astir with activity and it's a tolerable group of fighters who are campaigning in the division—namely Champion Freddie Steele, Fred Apostoli, Teddy Yaroz, Lou Brouillard, Solly Krieger and Glenn Lee. But Freddie Steele, as champion, is something less than the master of all that he surveys in his division.

He got himself tipped over the other night by No. 1 Challenger Apostoli and all that saved the crown for Steele was the pound and a half difference in the weights. It wasn't a case of Steele being outpointed by a slim margin or losing a phoney decision. He was beaten into a protoplasmic mass and technically knocked out in the ninth round.

There isn't much question about

G. W. Routs Elon, 46-29, In Easy Tilt

O'Brien, Butterworth, Garber Combination Again Prevails.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

A lean and lanky band of Christians from Elon College brought a seven-game winning streak to Tech High last night but were lucky to escape with their scalps as George Washington outpassed, outplayed and outscored the visitors for a 46-to-29 victory, its fifth straight. The President's Birthday fund game was attended by some 300 fans.

It was evident after some 3 minutes of play, when the Colonials garnered a 6-to-0 lead, that the Elon crew was hardly a match. The locals increased the margin to 20-11 at half time and when the North Carolina five threatened in the second half, drawing within 6 points, G. W. put on the steam and soon had the result out of reach.

Coach Clair Bee, talented mentor of the famed Long Island University quintet, watched the game from a scout's standpoint, as the Colonials play his team on January 19, and called the team the best he has seen this season, bar none. And that includes Minnesota, Stanford and N. Y. U.

Likes Colonials.

Bee, who is also here to confer with G. W. officials about changing the site of the New York contest to the Hippodrome, where they could accommodate a larger crowd, said the Colonials would be favorites over his team by a comfortable margin, although Mr. Bee may have been crying the blues.

The game was in its early stages when Garber, Butterworth and O'Brien scored in quick succession for a 6-to-0 lead. Jim Abbitt, guard of the visitors, who will try out with the Washington Redskins next season, a product of the pro grid draft, then scored the first points for the Elons.

The Reinhart-coached lads gave a classy exhibition of trick passing, working in and pot-shot shooting for the remainder of the half, including three shots from midcourt by Jack Butterworth that never touched the rims.

O'Brien Tops Scores.

O'Brien's 14 points led the scorers of both teams and Butterworth was next with 10. Whitley garnered 8 for Elon, while Bradley had 6, as did Faris, of G. W. Second teams played the final five minutes for both schools.

In a preliminary the George Washington Freshmen continued their winning ways, trouncing Washington-Lee High, 41 to 18.

BUCK'S BACK WITH A BANG!

Buck Everett, the Washington laddie, staged a "comeback" at Turner's Arena last night with a two-round kayo victory over Murray Kanner. Murray is shown just as he hit the canvas.

* * * *

Local 'Wonder Boy's' Failure to Put New York Veteran Away for Count Puzzles Large House; Everett Knocks Out Murray in 2d Round.

By Bob Garrison.

Georgie Abrams, the local middleweight they're raving about, converted Leo "Red" Finnegan into No. 16 in his consecutive string of professional victories last night at Turner's Arena. But an injured thumb kept him from living up to all the ravings.

His usual dynamic, savage, two-fisted attack, unleashed for the first three rounds, tapered off to a jab-jab offensive in the latter rounds but was enough to give George a unanimous eight-round decision.

It appeared during the first three sessions that the Washington boy had a knockout within reach, but a badly sprained digit on his right hand and Finnegan's punching-bag response to blows produced the ultimate result.

Uninformed that the 19-year-old boy had suffered the hand ailment, the 2,000 fans called loud for a draw, after George had finished rather slowly—but not so slowly that he couldn't do everything better than the New York veteran, who has fought some good middleweights in his time. That even includes punching with a right hand.

Finnegan Takes Plenty.

The New Yorker's only forte was his ability to absorb punishment. He was a pretty good in-fighter and may have added to George's schooling to the extent that he taught him several ways of landing back hand blows in the clinches. Otherwise, George might just as well worked on a sand bag.

In those first three rounds, Abrams' right hand and his clever dancing that kept him outside any of Finnegan's wild swinging rights and fairly acurate lefts. Even after the fourth round, when Finnegan was given a rest from the rain of rights and gained strength as a result, he couldn't hurt the former Golden Glover.

George never was tagged with a good right but several times took series of lefts in the midsection. Abrams had to exert little more energy or knowledge than he does in sparring sessions. The only difference was he got paid for it.

Everett Kayoes Kanner.

Buck Everett, the "spoiler," rode again in the semifinal bout with Murray Kanner. Fresh from his rebuilding vacation in the North Carolina mountains, Buck scored the quickest, one-punch knockout seen in a Washington ring in many, many moons.

It was just as sudden and almost as fatal as a bolt from above. After 2 minutes and 5 seconds of even slugging in the second round Referee Denny Hughes counted out the young Jewish protege of Matt Twomey, who has now seen a complete recession of his stable, which also includes Lou Gevinson and Steve Mamakos.

Most unusual about the knockout was the fact Kanner was counted out while staggering on his feet. Stunned after Everett's quick right floored him, he arose as Hughes was counting off the eighth second. Hughes, however, did not stop counting. He pulled the on-rushing Everett away and counted Kanner out. Then he moved to Buck's corner and raised his hand in victory.

There was no question about Kanner's being "out," however, for if the blow from his opponent wasn't enough to stop him, then the jolt his head received as it struck the bottom rope definitely incapacitated the former intercollegiate boxer.

Johnny Lucas Wins.

Johnny Lucas, the bald Camden veteran returned to Washington after a lengthy absence and won a unanimous eight-round decision from Battlin' Billy Borroughs, a newcomer from Pascagoula, Miss.

It was a bang-up fight, with the Mississippi boy charging all the time. He took many hard rights

War Admiral Displays Good Form in Workout

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 10 (AP). War Admiral, Samuel D. Riddle's 1937 3-year-old champion, which is pointing for the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup to be decided at Hialeah Park on March 5, was out on the track Sunday for another gallop. Trainer George Conway, who is giving the Man o' War colt a careful prep for his return to action at Hialeah, let his charge step a half mile in :51 2-5. The bay beauty was frisky and anxious to run, and was only breezing as he completed his thoroughly satisfactory move.

Purdue Bows After Taking Nine in Row

Illinois Wins, 51-43, in Wild Battle; Gophers Lose to Indiana.

By the Associated Press.

Champaign, Ill., Jan. 10.—Illinois ended Purdue's string of nine straight victories this season here tonight with a rough 51-to-43 victory.

The officials called 36 fouls as 7,316 fans packed the gym to watch the Illini annex their first conference victory in three starts.

The game was marked by numerous near fights. Jay Wardley, Illini guard, went out because of injuries.

With the exception of the first minute of the game, the Illini were never headed. The winners led at the half, 29 to 13.

GOPHERS BOW.

Minneapolis, Jan. 10 (AP).—Minnesota's basketball team dropped its second consecutive Western Conference game tonight, 39 to 38, to a slow-breaking Indiana quint. The victory was the second win in three loop starts for the Hoosiers.

The Gophers, unable to get their fast-breaking defense working, were trailing during almost the entire game, and by a 20-15 score at the half.

Earns $2,100; Revolta Gets Second Spot

United Press Sports Writer.

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.—Chunky Jimmie Thomson, the longest driver in golf, swept to his first major tournament victory today when he played the final 16 holes of the $7,500 Los Angeles Open in 68.

The par-shattering round gave him scores of 65-66-74-68 for an aggregate 273, a new tournament record.

A perennial runner-up because his work on the greens could not compare with his booming wood shots, the blond Pennsylvania professional stroked to his impressive victory—worth $2,100—with a second-hand putter he picked out of a junk shop for a dollar.

Set New Record.

Second in the 1935 National Open, the 1936 P. G. A. championship and the 1937 $10,000 Miami Biltmore Open, Thomson was carried into first place of the Los Angeles event by the impetus of two subpar rounds during the first two days, when he established a new P. G. A. record of 131 strokes for 36 holes of tournament play.

The boyish-looking veteran from Shawnee-on-Delaware won with a four-stroke advantage over his closest opponent, John Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., who shot 69 today for an aggregate of 277.

Thomson's card was:

Par out	5	4	3	4	4	4	4	4	4	—36
Out	6	4	2	4	4	4	4	3	4	—35
Par in	3	4	4	4	5	3	4	4	4	—36
In	3	4	3	4	4	3	4	4	4	—33

The four-day total of 273 for 72 holes was 13 strokes under par.

Revolta won undisputed possession of second place and $1,260 when he threaded the Wilson course in Griffith Park for a subpar last round of 69, two under standard figures.

Little and Picard Tie.

Third place developed into a tie between Lawson Little, of San Francisco and Henry Picard, the chocolate soldier from Hershey, Pa., at 270. Little at one time was five strokes under par on the final 18 holes but lost his chance to catch the leaders when he three-putted the fifteenth, sixteenth and eighteenth greens. Picard won his spot when he ran out a 50-foot putt on the last hole and split third and fourth place with Little at $840 each.

Four players deadlocked for fifth place—Horton Smith, Chicago 210-69—279; Lloyd Mangrum, Dayton, Ohio, 208-71—279; Willie Goggin, San Bruno, Calif., 209-70—279, and George Von Elm, Los Angeles, 210-69—279. Each won $350.

Olin Dutra, Los Angeles veteran took undisputed possession of ninth money, $126—with 209-71—280. Bruce McCormick, Los Angeles fireman, who is national public links champion, won amateur honors for the second successive year with 212-69—281.

'Live' and 'Dead' Balls Hit Over Fence

National League Sphere Has Dull Sound in Baltimore Test.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Jan. 10.—Mid-winter tests today of the new National League "dead" ball with sluggers from three leagues participating brought three conclusions:

1—The dead ball has a soggy "whoosh" sound when hit.

Before 300 shivering fans and sports writers, sluggers in Oriole Park indiscriminately "whacked" or "whooshed" 18 balls to oblivion over the fence.

Jimmy Foxx, of the Boston Red Sox, former home run king, slammed two of each type over the wall and announced:

"I don't think the dead ball will hurt the .340 hitters in the National League as much as the .275 players. I look for a difference of 20 points for the light men but only 4 or 5 for the sluggers."

Chuck Klein, the Phillies National League slugger, who likewise sent a pair of each type over the fence, said:

"If you like a 'whooshy' ball—that's O. K. I like the old ball—but it doesn't make much difference."

Charlie Keller, leading slugger for the International League in 1937, didn't do so well with the dead ball but smacked the "live" ones into the bleachers with monotonous regularity.

"I don't like that soggy sound," he complained of the other.

Said Jack Ogden, general manager of the Orioles—"About all the tests prove is that if you hit the ball on the nose it will go over the fence whether it's a dead ball or a live ball."

From the pitcher's standpoint, however, there is a decided difference, said Johnny Wittig, of the Orioles, who did the hurling.

"The raised stitches on the dead ball will give the pitcher a better chance to curve the ball," he announced.

Just in case the tests proved inconclusive, Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Senators, was reported planning to ask the Bureau of Standards, in Washington, to test the home run values of both balls.

New York, Jan. 10.—This winter's holdout siege among big league ball players may be louder but no funnier than last year's pop-off warfare, which featured Dizzy Dean . . . It's getting to be somewhat repetitious, besides being overrated from the standpoint of belligerence.

There's fast-gathering membership for "association to restore Dizzy Dean to good standing" . . . It seems to be based largely on ideas that (1) sports writers have used up their turn at bat against the great Cardinal pitcher and (2) Dizzy himself has shut off his steam pipes.

Danarco Makes Show of Field Winning Governor's Purse at Tropical

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Jan. 10. Danarco, flying the light blue and gold banner of the Toronto-owned Cosgrave Stable, made a show of six other 4-year-olds in winning the Governor's Purse of 1 mile here today. The gelded son of Caruso made it three straight triumphs while Florida's Governor, Fred Cone, viewed the event from the stewards' stand.

Brandon Stable's Tonianna got up right at the wire to finish second, three lengths back and a head before Mrs. J. McGraw's Prince Sador. Danarco, paying $7.20, ran the 8 furlongs in 1:38 flat under Apprentice H. Mora. After the race, Gov. Cone made a floral wreath presentation.

The Medway Stable, which had won two previous races on the card, did not fare so well in this contest. Max B., the favorite and trained by George Alexandra, brother of the winner's conditioner, A. E. Alexandra, made the early running, then faded back and beat only one horse.

There was little excitement to the feature once Danarca shot past Max B. near the far turn. The gelding simply toyed with his field, stealing into such a long advantage that it was obvious to all that the purse was at his mercy. Max B. dropped entirely out of it upon reaching the front lane. It remained for Prince Sador and Tonianna to dispute the place issue through the last furlong.

Strange Times, somewhat neglected in the betting, turned in a very game performance to emerge a head winner over Johnnycake, the second choice, in the 6-furlong initial event. Miss Chicro was third, a length and a half away, while Elwawa, the favorite, never could threaten. Freddie Scheih, snapping out of a slump that has pursued him for almost the entire meeting, rode a splendid race astride Strange Times. He had the elderly mare alongside the pacemaking Robert S., disposed of that gelding entering the stretch, then held his mount together to stave off Johnnycake's bid. The combination paid $19.

Taking the lead from his inside position just after the start, the veteran sprinter, Dreel, a former A. G. Vanderbilt colorbearer now owned by N. D. Levy, held his field safe all the way to win the second race by three parts of a length. Mike Sarno rode a powerful race to keep his mount on top. Dreel's class stood him in good stead in a hard-earned triumph. He paid $14.40. The place went to the long-priced Marition, which headed the highly fancied Scottish Mary.

The third race, for 3-year-old maiden platers, proved strictly a long-shot affair. Woodwaac and temple Fall left their rivals far behind to pay "telephone figures." Woodwaac wore down Temple Fall after 3 furlongs and scored by a length and a half to return $101.30, $55.10 and $27, while Temple Fall, second by 5 lengths, paid $47.80 place and $20.20 show. Cave Hill landed thes how. The favored My Wo began poorly and failed to figure in the running.

The Medway Stable and Jockey Freddie Scheih earned doubles when Kehurst, favored by a flying start, while the heavily backed Evening Pe was eliminated by a poor ak; took the fourth purse by a th and a half. Joe D, also away is toes, chased the victor all ay and lasted to save second by a half-length. Bindy held the show position safe. st was on the head end from nd and returned $10.80.

Beak-Busting Bu siness Bad at Best - - - Battlers Baffle Brockman

By Walter Haight.

It isn't even nice work if you can get it—at least, not in my book. I mean this business of trying to earn a living giving and taking punches. Sometimes I'm thankful for my receding chin; or perhaps I should say, my graduating series of chins. At any rate I've never had any desire to fight and, after talking to Ed Brockman, the Baltimore boxing referee, yesterday, I'm glad that I can't pound anything but the capital "I" on this typewriter.

Referee Brockman and a crowd of Salisbury fight fans saw the immovable object met the irresistible force the other night, and the combination provided one of the few truly "double knockouts" in the history of the ring.

Otts Baxer, a Baltimore boy, who goes at the Rialto Friday night if there isn't another false start, was scheduled to battle Norris Polk, a Salisbury lad, "six rounds or less," and the fight lasted less than a round.

After Brockman had given the rivals their instructions, they returned to their corners, shuffled their feet until the bell sounded and then advanced to the center of the ring. Baker swung a left hook that caught Norris on the jaw and he went down like a log and the fans began looking at programs to determine the next bout.

Brockman drolled off the count, got to nine and Norris jumped to his feet. A powerful right came up from the floor with him. The roundhouse caught Baker on the chin and he went down, much to the delight of the hometown rooters.

Brockman then began counting sheep for Baker. At the count of five, Baker began to get organized and at nine he arose and assumed his fighting pose. But Polk was ready with another poke. This time he caught Baker with an uppercut and the Baltimore boy went down for the second time.

The referee was beginning to believe he had been hired as a tobacco auctioneer. He counted over Baker, but the boy was quicker this time. At the count of three he meshed brain with body and got up. The Salisbury rooters were yelling for the "kill." Polk marched into Baker to put on the finishing touches and ran into a left hook from the Baltimore boy and went down.

It was beginning to look as if two guys were using the Salisbury mat as a flophouse, with the referee hired to sing the lullabies.

Brockman began counting. The hometown boy made good. If Baker could get up at the count of three—well, Polk could get up at three. The Salisbury boy hopped to his feet.

Baker fell flat on his back, but not so with Polk. He had to be different for the sake of the home-town crowd, so he dangled on the ropes.

"When I reached 10 both were on the floor," said Brockman. "They were unable to rise."

"They were assisted to the dressing room and both were out for five minutes after reaching their quarters. Then came the big question of what to call the bout. Should the fighter first regaining his feet be declared the winner, or should it be called a draw?

"I decided it was a draw. They were both down when the count of 10 was completed. Some of the fellows in the crowd wanted me to go to the dressing room and stand around until one or the other regained consciousness and then bring him back to the ring and hold his hand up."

The majority of fans, however, agreed with Brockman's decision, although he says that he has searched the rules and could find nothing about double knockouts.

Brockman said it was the most emphatic "draw" that he ever encountered in refereeing more than 15,000 fights. In addition to each hitting the other simultaneously, the battle was exactly even up to that point. The action stopped after 2 minutes and 54 seconds.

I repeat—it isn't even nice work if you can get it.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DREEL, $14.40, $6.70, $4.50; MARITION, $14.40, $7.50; SCOTTISH MARY, $2.60.

DREEL, away forwardly, moved to the front rapidly on the inside on the run down the backstretch, shook off repeated challenges from his opposition and then outlasted MARITION in the final drive. MARITION, buffeted about in the early stages, secured clear passage on the inside in the last quarter mile, finished gamely to punishment and was wearing the winner down. SCOTTISH MARY, crowded and shuffled about in the opening 3 furlongs, swung to the outside entering the stretch and lost ground. She closed gamely through the stretch to finish fastest of all.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOODWAAC, $101.30, $55.10, $27.00; TEMPLE FALL, $47.80, $20.20; CAVE HILL, $5.80.

WOODWAAC, away forwardly, went in close attendance of the pace from the start, saved much ground entering the stretch and shook off TEMPLE FALL in the final drive. TEMPLE FALL, on the outside, took a short lead in the early running, came slightly wide entering the stretch and faltered when the real test came. CAVE HILL, well handled and obtaining clear passage the entire trip, had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:43. Off at 3:43. Winner, Medway Stable's br. c. (3), by Philippi—Venus. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AKEHURST, $10.80, $7.70, $5.70; JOE D., $11.40, $7.60; BINDY, $8.50.

AKEHURST, breaking alertly, was hustled to the front while saving ground rounding the first turn. He was taken in hand after entering the backstretch, had something in reserve when challenged and held his opposition safe in the stretch drive. JOE D., going in closest pursuit of the leader all the way, came wide entering the stretch, finished gamely to punishment and outlasted BINDY. The latter, well up and saving the most ground the entire trip, was gaining on the leaders in the last strides.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DANARCO, $7.20, $4.30, $3.20; TONIANNA, $5.60, $5.20; PRINCE SADOR, $4.00.

DANARCO, quickest to begin, was carried wide rounding the first turn. He moved into contention on the outside after entering the backstretch, drew out into a winning lead and maintained his lead through the stretch under mild urging. TONIANNA, rated off the pace until midway around the lower turn, responded courageously to punishment and wore PRINCE SADOR down in the last stride. PRINCE SADOR, well up and slipping through on the inside for the entire trip, moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but then faltered.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:43. Off at once. Winner, G. T. Haina's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DISTRACT, $8.80, $5.80, $3.90; JAMES A., $17.80, $11.70; WALTER MORTON, $7.20.

DISTRACT, well handled, went in close pursuit of the leader in the early running. He moved to the front at the furlong pole, but stumbled slightly 20 yards out and was vigorously driven to stave off JAMES A.'s challenge. The latter, away fast, displayed good early speed while saving ground and, responding gamely to punishment, continued courageously in the final drive. WALTER MORTON, on the inside from the start and troubled repeatedly, held on tenaciously through the stretch to outlast ST. MORITZ.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:13. Off at 5:14. Winner, A. C. Rowe's br. g. (9), by Epinard—Prudish. Trained by P. Reuter. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13 1-5, 1:39 2-5, 1:45 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ESPINACA, $4.00, $3.10, $2.50; U DEMON, $4.40, $3.20; FAR CRY, $3.20.

ESPINACA held his opposition safe for speed and rated in front in the opening half, drew clear with little effort when called upon and held away thereafter to win in hand. U DEMON broke slowly. He stole through on the inside going into the backstretch, moved up steadily, but never seriously threatened the winner. FAR CRY, under restraint early, gradually bettered his position when placed to pressure, but could not overhaul the leaders.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $700; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:42. Off at 5:46½. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. g. (7), by Chatterton—Hurry Home. Trained by A. E. Alexandra. Value to winner, $525; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 1-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—R. PINCHOT, $5.10, $4.10, $3.00; JEZREEL, $6.80, $4.20; BABWRACK, $4.80.

R. PINCHOT followed the pace on the inside under steadying restraint until leaving the backstretch. He swung around BROWN MARVEL leaving the backstretch, raced him into defeat and drew off into a commanding lead, but then faltered and was vigorously ridden to maintain his advantage. JEZREEL, worked his way up gradually on the outside, closed gamely to punishment and outlasted BABWRACK. The latter, away slowly, gained steadily and, saving ground entering the stretch, finished gamely, but was in tight quarters the last 70 yards.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

George Odom, noted New York trainer, is on the warpath and I don't mean maybe. Some tipster has been using his name to impress his clients and tout horses. Odom has been getting phone calls and letters "bawling" him out for having sent losers and giving him honeyed words for having sent winners. It is against the horseman's code and a violation of all racing etiquette for owners and trainers to permit the use of their names in touting schemes and Odom wants the whole world to know that some malicious tipster is making false use of his name. Odom, who will make his headquarters at Hialeah on Wednesday, will appreciate hearing from those persons who have been approached, as he desires to make every effort to track down the swindler. The Headley forces won't have Whopper, winner in 1936 and 1937, in action for this year's Inaugural Handicap at Hialeah, but they will be represented by Fraidy Cat and Preeminent, a formidable pair. Here's hoping we can squeeze some winners out of Tropical's getaway card. With Clocker Mike over at Hialeah there's a chance.

BILL.

First race—Many Moons appears to be well placed in the day's opener and needs only the right ride. Exhort has a good speed figure and should be in the thick of contention. Balance Step to take care of the others.

Second race — Wise Fox has enough speed to defeat a field of this caliber and needs only to run his race. Quick Action has worked impressively and should be close. Time and Again will be hard to keep out of the money.

Third race—Debate is a fair sort and exhibits both speed and courage on occasions. Appears to have found the right spot among these. Noble Boy and Black Foot II will be ready to battle it out if the top one falters.

Fourth race—Irish Moon deserves the call in this event and any price will be a good one. Jacqueline M likes this track and is ready to give the first named a keen battle. Freedman to collect the minor award.

Fifth race—Pattycake earns his way in this kind of company and appears headed for a set of brackets. This one is fit as hands can make a horse and deserves attention. Our Willie and Bernard F. seem to have something on the others.

Sixth race — Sun Antioch finds conditions that suit in this rather open affair. Will have no time to loaf but appears a shade better than On Rush, a good worker. Crowning Glory should take down a piece of the pay off.

Seventh race—The route and the track are favorable to the purposes of Lynx and I see no reason for mistakes. Founder and Halle to chase the top one to the wire.

Eighth race—Count Me has the edge on these routers and I'm going to string along regardless of price. Trujillo and Master Bean should account for money positions.

Best Bet—Wise Fox.

Riders, Eastern Open Series Today

Cage Teams Are Keyed For Battles

Opening Contest Is Set for 3:30 O'Clock in Tech Gymnasium.

By Jack Munhall.

Eastern and Rosevelt, expected to be troublesome challengers for Western's interhigh basketball title, meet this afternoon in their series debuts.

The meeting is scheduled for Tech gym at 3:30 o'clock in the opening half of a dobule-header which also brings together Central and Tech, at 4:15.

Although interest in both clashes run high, most attention probably will attach to the Central-Tech game for it marks an early crucial turn for the Mount Pleasant five. Beaten, 20-19, by Western in the opener, Central must whip Tech or virtually be erased from title consideration, on the basis of previous series.

Would Lead By Victory.

For Tech, too, the game is important. The McKinley boys spanked Wilson last week and a decision over Central would gain it undisputed possession of the lead, since coleading Western idles.

The Eastern-Roosevelt contest has assumed all earmarks of a tough struggle, despite some prevailing opinions that Eastern is destined to romp to the championship. The Lincoln Park team, although it is generally conceded to have the best material of any of the competing schools, has not impressed in preseries games. However, Roosevelt boasting none of the stars that grace Eastern's roster, has come along fast in its initial tests.

Eastern's record includes a misleading loss to Bethesda-Chevy Chase when it operated minus three regulars and an unimpressive 30-24 conquest of Gonzaga. Roosevelt has captured three of four games, losing to a strong alumni aggregation.

On data also gleaned from the cold, matter-of-fact records, Tech figures to shade Central in the latest renewal of their classical rivalry but here again figures seem to lie. Jack Ray's Central squal gave favored Western a fearful scrap before subsiding in a one-point defeat and also dropped a close, 37-34, contest to highly regarded John Marshall in the Richmond tournament.

Split With Briarley.

In other games Central split a pair of contests with Briarley and lost to a star-studded alumni aggregation.

Tech, appearing somewhat loose but strangely effective in its play to date, has defeated Gonzaga and Wilson and lost to powerful St. John's Prep and the alumni, showing adamant strength in all games but clicking in none.

Eastern's veteran combination will include Matera and Hancock, forwards; Quantrille, center, and Lombardy and Lusby, guards. Roosevelt's tentative starters are forwards, Treganowan and Freund; center, Love, and guards, Stein and Zuras.

Arena Fights

that apparently didn't feaze him in the least for he continued, like the river, to keep rolling along. He carried the fight to Lucas and earned many friends by his willingness to step in and mix it.

Jimmy Erwin's new find connected many times with a nice left hook and that would have won him the nod had he been able to avoid the New Jerseyite's port-side punch and land his own in the exchange. He threw his right only once and that time, in the seventh, he rocked the boy who last year was the Nation's eighth ranking welterweight. It was a close and well-matched fight.

Brookman Is Victor.

El Brookman, former Golden Glove, won a unanimous four-round decision from Young Tony Ross, Baltimore welterweight, in a hit and miss affair. It was the local boy's fifth straight pro victory.

In the four-round opening event, Lou Jameson, 147-pound local boy, won a unanimous decision from Tommy Hoover, another District welterweight who was lucky to stay the distance.

Four Games Set.

Keyser, W. Va., Jan. 10.—The nine-school Potomac Valley Conference will settle down to its long basketball grind with four games scheduled this week. A total of 41 other contests will be played by the member schools, Parsons, Petersburg, Piedmont, Thomas, Keyser, Franklin, Moorefield and Circleville.

Circleville to Open.

Circleville, W. Va., Jan. 10.—Circleville High will open a 12-game schedule next Friday with Franklin High. Coach Harry E. Wenrich, a Gettysburg College product, has 11 holdovers from last year and 7 newcomers.

Falco Ready For Jesserun Here Friday

Ancient Rivals Will Top Rialto Fistic Show; Fans Interested.

Still one of the smartest boxers in the ring and a tough trial horse a la Johnny Risko, Falco is conceded much better than an outside chance of repeating over Jessurun in their scheduled 10-round return bout.

Falco's picturesque career is studded with upsets and the wrecking of promising buildups, Joey Ferrando, Jessurun and Andy Bundy being numbered among his victims of the last two years. Falco also boxed out three decisions over Johnny Jadick after Johnny had twice defeated Tony Canzoneri and spiked the aspirations of Jackie (Kid) Berg and Harry Dublinsky when both were r i d i n g high.

Probably outstanding among the many surprise victories scored by Falco was his 1934 defeat of Young Peter Jackson at a time the colored Pacific Coast boy enjoyed the reputation Henry Armstrong boasts now, rocketing into the national spotlight as a result of that victory.

Red hot in New York following consecutive wins over Vittorio Venturi and Frankie Cinque, Jessurun can ill afford to lose to Falco at this time and is priming himself accordingly. Boxing Venturi out of a fifth ranking intended for him by the National Boxing Association in Madison Square Garden, and in big demand as a box office attraction, defeat for 21-year-old Andrea at this time might sound a death knell to his prospects.

A gratifying response to the advance ticket sale yesterday was reported at the Rialto Theater's office. Stage seats are being elevated and two new box offices installed.

'Connie' Wyche's Club Boasts Strong Line-up

The Seven-Up baseball club, being the first to organize, with "Connie" Wyche as manager, will enter the Industrial League with the strongest line-up on the sandlots this season.

Wyche also has a stiff road schedule, opening the season with Norfolk of the Piedmont League, Sunday April 17, and ending the season Sunday, September 25, with Lynchburg, Va.

With Frank Baroni, William Helmer, of Newport News, Va., and "Lefty" Brown to do the pitching and Russ Kidwell on the receiving end the team will be plenty tough.

For games call Atlantic 1073 after 6 p. m. or address 1500 Trinidad avenue northeast.

Mercer Announces 1938 Grid Schedule

Macon, Ga., Jan. 10 (AP).—Anticipating the biggest football squad in Mercer history, numerically if not physically, Coach Lake Russell today announced a ten-game schedule for next fall that includes games with Georgia Tech, Tulane and Georgia.

Al Pierera And Indian On Mat Card

Strong Supporting Bouts Being Arranged at Turner's.

With Bronko Nagurski, recognized world's wrestling champion, on his way East for the defense of his crown Thursday night at Turner's Arena against John Sullivan, Promoter Turner yesterday started lining up a strong supporting card.

First on the supporting list will be Al Perlera, European title claimant, and Chief Chewaki, the New Mexico Indian, who have been scheduled for a 45-minute semi-windup bout.

Periera, born in Portugal, has done all right by himself since coming to this country. He drew with Jim Londos in Baltimore a few months ago. In three local matches he is unbeaten, his victim last week being Hans von Blumberg, of Germany.

The European giant, according to his manager, Ed Contos, is anxious to meet Nagurski in a title match. Contos is the man who brought Periera to this country, and if both Negurski and Periera win Thursday night—they may meet in a match here shortly.

Nagurski may arrive in Washington a day in advance of the match to meet his legion of friends from Minnesota. In Milwaukee the other night the "Nag" won easily from a former champion, Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg.

North Carolinians Are Defeated by Howard Cagers

Howard University cagers last night trounced the North Carolina State College quintet, 51 to 31, in the Howard gym for their fourth victory of the season.

Leading, 32 to 12, at half time, the local school was never pressed in scoring over the Carolinians, their attack including 15 points from the foul stripe.

Wynne, H. Jones and Gould accounted for a majority of the Howard scoring, with H. Johnson, of the visitors, taking individual honors for the evening with 14 points.

The Howard five will meet the State College five again tonight at 8 o'clock. In a preliminary game the Howard Jayvees defeated the Monroe Presidents, 26 to 19.

LOUIS SORESI, manager of VITTORIO VENTURI, who was scheduled to have fought here last Friday at the Rialto, offered to send Matchmaker HOWARD LIVINGSTON an X-ray photo to prove that his f i g h t e r ' s t h u m b was really broken . . . That gave LIVINGSTON quite a laugh, knowing as he did that X-ray p h o t o s of broken bones all look alike . . . And that the man who handled PRIMO CARNERA'S hectic fistic career could easily send any broken bone photo . . . Table Tennis Draws Stars

Entry Deadline Extended One Day Here.

Entries for the District of Columbia table tennis championships, to be played at the Heurich gymnasium January 14 and 15, close tomorrow at the local courts. Closing time was extended a day by Tournament Chairman George H. Foster.

Defending men's singles champion, Elias Shuman, Wilson Teachers College star, and last year's finalist, Ed Gee, Shuman's doubles partner, are among the entries received and are cofavorites to win the crown.

The women's champion, Madeline Teghtmeir, will not defend her title, and Florence Farwell and Charlotte Decker, the latter D. C. girl's lawn tennis champion, are among the choices for the vacated title.

In addition to the championship play, a B Class will be played for nonranking players. The tourney starts Friday night and continues Saturday afternoon, with the finals carded Saturday night.

Barney Ross' mastery of the welterweight division but he isn't what the boys call a fighting champion. He is stultifying the divisions by his inactivity, having accepted only one title bout in two years. Last summer he brought his title out of the moth balls against Ceferino Garcia and gave the Puerto Rican a boxing lesson. He has shown no disposition to fight since then, probably on the grounds that there isn't a welterweight worth while fighting.

Lew Ambers cannot exactly be called one of the great lightweight champions of modern or other times. He won his title from a Tony Canzoneri who had retained little of his salad-days power and was operating chiefly on a fighting heart. Ambers, after winning the title, managed to get himself outpointed in at least two nontitle affairs and, altogether, added nothing to the proud history of the lightweight-class crown.

That brings us down to the featherweight division, and with the champion of that class there can be no quarrel. Dusky Henry Armstrong is the most scintillating champion of any weight to happen along since Barney Ross won the lightweight title a half dozen years ago.

Armstrong has done everything asked of him and literally buzz-sawed his way through the field of challengers to get the shot at Petey Sarron's title. And when the final test came he went into his fighting frenzy again and flattened Sarron in six rounds to win the title from a legitimate champion. And Armstrong's style of fighting has injected color into the featherweight division, lifting it perhaps to the highest place among all weight classes.

Bantam Class Dull.

It's no less than a sorry state of affairs that exists in the bantamweight class. Baltimore's Harry Jeffra, the champion, wears a crown that is considerably tainted and was not so glittering in the first place. Jeffra won the title from the Puerto Rican, Sixto Escobar, who was outpointed twice by Jeffra before finally consenting to lay his title on the line.

Since graduating to the champion, Jeffra has fallen into the habit of other modern-day champions—getting himself licked. He had an awful time of it winning from the obscure Armand Sicilia in Washington a month ago, and ten days ago in Mexico City he lost a nontitle affair to Pancho Villa. Loud have been the cries of "cheese champ!"

That brings us down to the flyweight division and even the fight writers don't know who the flyweight champion is these days. Nobody cares to see the flyweights in action any more and not so many years ago Jimmy Kelley sold his contract with Champion Midget Wolgast for a pack of cigarettes. Time was when Jimmy Wilde made a pretty penny with his flyweight title, but the title these days is no less than meaningless.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

So often you have heard that the National Archivist looks green-eyedly at the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence, reposing solemnly in the Library of Congress instead of in the new Archives structure, where, it is reported, the Archivist thinks the two important documents ought to be . . . The truth is nothing of the sort, the Third Annual Report from the Archivist indicates.

"It has been recently said, for instance, that the National Archives should preserve only 'a few rare documents, such as the Constitution, Declaration of Independence, treaties, proclamations of outstanding interest, and so forth.' This conception of the functions of an archival establishment arises from confusing archives with historical manuscripts and the purposes and functions of an archival establishment with those of a historical society or museum . . ."

Such documents as these should, of course, be preserved, "but they will necessarily always form but a very small proportion of the archives of a government. Despite its inestimable sentimental value to the American people, the Emancipation Proclamation, for instance, has far less administrative value than thousands of records made daily by obscure clerks in the course of the regular business operations of the Government.

Some time ago, the Council of Personnel Administration requested employes in several Federal agencies to draft proposals for improving personnel administration. The response was a heavy pile of proposals, some several hundred, in fact. Tonight the council meets to air out, by panel discussion, the merits of the recommendations. The panel, to consist of personnel administrators for Federal agencies, will discuss the suggestions most frequently made, especially those concerning promotions and efficiency rating procedures. On the panel will be:

F. A. Birgfeld (Treasury), chairman; E. J. Gardner (Commerce); C. C. Hathaway (Civil Service Commission), W. L. Mitchell (Social Security Board), and R. C. Smith (Labor).

The meeting will be held from 8 to 9:30 p. m. at the departmental auditorium, Constitution avenue, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets. The discussion will be preceded by a motion picture of Glacier national Park. The meeting, the second in the council's winter series, is open to the public without admission charge.

Notes.

Lee H. Shugar writes in: Inasmuch as the G. A. O. News is devoted to news of the doings of the G. A. O. Branch of Local No. 2 (N. F. F. E.), and also includes personal items of nonmembers, we have felt that perhaps the name G. A. O. News does not do justice to the field that the News is covering. We are offering as a prize two theater tickets to the person sending in the best name that would cover the sphere in which the News is centered. Those interested in naming the paper will please mail a card to headquarters stating the name that they think would be appropriate. A P. S. adds that the News will make its appearance on time this issue. Taking a clew from the postcript, and encouraged that the News will appear henceforth on schedule, this column suggests the name: "The G. A. O. Timeclock." If not acceptable, how about "The G. A. O. Accounter," or "The G. A. O. Check-up." Or, in the light of current congressional aims on the G. A. O., it might defiantly flaunt the name: "The G. A. O. Forever!"

The eighth annual banquet of the Federal Traffic Club will be held Saturday, February 26, at the National Press Club, L. A. Smith, the secretary, writes in. The club was formed in 1928 and its membership consists of traffic and transportation men in the Federal service, as well as transportation men associated with the various railroads having representatives in Washington. . . . Meeting for this week by the N. F. F. E. are as follows: Tonight—7 o'clock, finance committee, Local No. 2, 710 Fourteenth street northwest; 8 p. m., Bureau of Engraving Women's Local No. 105, Willard Hotel; Wednesday—5 p. m., executive council, D. C. Federation Employes Unions, 710 Fourteenth street; 8 p. m., membership committee, D. C. Federation, F. E. U., 710 Fourteenth street, and Friday—8 p. m., Board of Representatives Local No. 2, 710 Fourteenth street.

So far as this column knows, the Government never has disposed of a stock of merchandise that clogged up the National Sales Counter at the Treasury's Procurement Division during the Christmas rush. For sale were: Three islands, a lighthouse and two quarantine stations. About the islands: One is called Mullet Key. It is off the Florida Coast, where the Gulf of Mexico meets Tampa Bay. It has about 280 acres, a few houses, some sunshine, some loneliness and a telephone. The other two are Diamond Island, off Portland, Me., and Straitsmouth Island, near Rockport, Mass. The lighthouse is at Buzzard's Bay; the quarantine stations near Callum, Wash., and Brunswick, Ga. Express your interest, if any, to the Procurement Division . . . Encouraged by the attendance of more than 200 persons at each of two Christmas holiday Saturday night parties, the District Organizing Committee, U. F. W. A., intends to hold the Saturday night parties from now on. The place is the national headquarters, 532 Seventeenth street northwest. The programs include dancing, refreshments and amateur entertainment.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Yesterday I announced that there would be no material changes in and additions to the Culbertson System for 1938. I explained that asking bids would be relegated to the background.

The same may be said for the two-way three bid. Actually, the greatest objection found in this conventional bid was its name, which sounded highly complicated. Since asking bids are no longer a basic part of the Culbertson System, they cannot be part of the continuation bidding after an opening three bid. The three bid, based on a long and solid, or almost solid trump suit, is still very much "in." But don't call it a "two-way three bid" unless you want to scare your partner to death.

The three bid we recommend has the same requirements—a good trump suit with at least seven winners in the hand, and perhaps nine or ten—but the responses are logical instead of artificial.

A suit response to a major suit three bid must still be construed as a strong hand, with at least 2½ honor-tricks. The suit in which the response is made should certainly be as good as A Q x x, or K Q x x, for othewise, why show the suit?

Today's Hand.

South, dealer,
Both sides vulnerable.

North: ♠ 8 7 ♡ A K ◇ 9 6 4 3 ♣ Q 10 8 6 5
West: ♠ 9 6 5 4 3 ♡ 7 4 ◇ J 8 5 2 ♣ K 7
East: ♠ K ♡ Q J 9 3 6 5 2 ◇ 10 7 ♣ A J 3
South: ♠ A Q J 10 2 ♡ 10 3 ◇ A K Q ♣ 9 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	2 N T	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South's last bid was very bad. He should have raised the notrump. His play at four spades was equally inept. He won the heart lead in dummy. After capturing the King, the second trump revealed that West had a sure trump trick. Declarer then cashed the Ace-King and Queen of diamonds, in the hope of setting up dummy's long diamond for a club discard. When West showed a diamond stopper, declarer, in desperation, led a club toward dummy. West hopped right up with the club King and returned his remaining club. East took the Ace and Jack, and West discarded his diamond. Declarer was down one.

A slight change in declarer's play would have made a vast difference. After finding out about the trump situation, the cashing of the three top diamonds was correct. Then, however, declarer should have used dummy's remaining heart as entry to ruff the fourth diamond with his otherwise worthless deuce of trump.

WILDCATS SCORE, 36-28.

Iowa City, Iowa, Jan. 10 (AP).—Northwestern's Wildcats won their third straight Big Ten basketball game this season here tonight as they ran over a punchless Iowa Team, 36 to 28.

WISCONSIN WINS.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 10 (AP).—The University of Wisconsin basketball team remained in the thick of the Big Ten title race tonight with a 50-to-27 victory over Chicago before a crowd of about 7,500.

Chicago's rangy team trailed from the start. Wisconsin had a 21-to-2 lead after 12 minutes of play and was ahead 29-to-13 at half time.

Charles Jones, center, led the Wisconsin scoring with 14 points on six field goals and two free throws.

Westmont Five Wins.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10.—A field goal by Jim Maley from the center of the floor six seconds before the end of the game climaxed a great rally in the final period and gave Westmont High School tossers of Johnstown, Pa., a 25-23 victory over Allegany High at the Campobello court here.

'Y' Girls Organize.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10.—The Cumberland Central Y. M. C. A. girls' basketball team, defeated only twice in the last five years, has organized for 1938 and expects to meet outstanding sextets of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Celanese Booters Win.

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 10.—The Allegany County championship Celanese A. A. soccer team successfully defended its crown by defeating the Barton Coke Yard Giants at Barton, 4-2.

Baruch Advises Financial Pact With Britain

Urges War Debt Adjustment and Stabilization of Dollar and Pound.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—Adjustment of the war debt and an agreement providing for "constant relationship" between the dollar and pound sterling were urged today by Bernard M. Baruch for inclusion in the trade conversations between Great Britain and the United States. In a statement prepared at the request of the Toronto Star, and made public at his office, Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board in the World War, said:

"Grave responsibilities rest upon the United States and Great Britain in the opportunity now presented to work out better understandings between the English-speaking democracies and commonwealths. Temporary advantages must be overlooked for the greater future benefit of all. These results should follow:

"1. Re-establish the sanctity of contracts by adjusting war debts.

"2. Establish a ratio between the monies of Great Britain, her commonwealths and dependencies and the American dollar. These monies should bear a constant relationship one to the other, irrespective of how other nations may evaluate theirs. We should leave ourselves free to change our monetary valuations vis-a-vis the rest of the world, but the ratio between English and American monies should remain fixed.

No Alliances.

"3. In view of the disturbed conditions of the world and the threat to democratic by antidemocratic nations, England and her commonwealths and the United States should be free to arm as circumstances demand, on the sea, in the air and on the land. We must make no military alliance, but both should agree never to use any of their armed forces against the other.

"In lieu of the 5-5-3 treaty, for every ton that Japan builds that, both Great Britain and America should each build two. When sanity returns to the world, I hope the English-speaking nations will take the lead for peace and disarmament;

"4. The pending Hull trade agreements lowering tariff barriers will increase trade of all English-speaking people and will help the whole world. They will point the way toward a peaceful solution of our gravest problems.

"We should not close the door to others, for none of this contemplates an economic or military alliance. Every other nation should be free to come into these agreements on a basis to be determined by the previous signatories to the arrangements, except in the case of war debts which the United States should reserve to itself, to take up with each country desiring to join in currency stabilization and trade agreements.

"Standards of work, hours and wages in existence when the treaties are made should be a part of any economic relations."

Cotton Climbs To New Highs

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Cotton resumed its advance into new high ground today on Wall street and other outside buying. March rallied from 8.49 to 8.60 and closed at 8.59, with final prices 9 to 11 points net higher.

The market advanced 3 to 4 points at the opening in sympathy with the action of foreign markets, but soon early encountered enough liquidation and Southern hedge selling to cause partial reactions.

Wheat Prices Steady After Rise and Fall

Argentine Gains, Strength in Stocks Overcome Early Declines.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Spurred by lively jumps of Argentine wheat quotations and by New York securities upturns, the Chicago wheat market scored late rallies today, virtually overcoming earlier setbacks.

The Buenos Aires wheat market made a sudden bulge of 2⅜ cents a bushel today just before trading here was ended. This bulge led to an outburst of last-minute general commission house demand for wheat futures in Chicago.

Aside from the skyrocket action of Buenos Aires wheat values, the upturns of securities at New York received particular attention as an aid to wheat market rallies. Furthermore, a liberal decrease of 4,511,000 bushels in the United States wheat visible supply total attracted notice.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were unchanged to three-fourths of a cent off compared with Saturday's finish; May, 97⅜@97⅝; July 91⅜. Corn, ⅜ to ¾ down; May, 62@62⅛; July, 62¼. Oats at ⅛ decline to ¼ advance. Rye, ⅛ lower to ⅛ up, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents dearer.

The Market

Stocks Advance Further in Active Trading; Commodities and U. S. Bonds Firm.

New York, Jan. 10.—Stocks, bonds and commodities moved higher in active trading. United States bonds went along with the crowd. Some of the commodities futures markets were buoyant and stocks moved up with more determination than has been seen in some time. Stock turnover was around 1,750,000 shares. May wheat dipped an eighth of a cent to 97¾ cents a bushel.

Nearly all varieties of stocks moved higher. Best prices were reached in early afternoon and most of the later dealings merely held the ground gained or gave up a small portion of it. The opening was irregularly higher with fractional changes in the majority. Favorite items were mail orders, mines, steels, airplanes and motors. Shipping shares were buoyant, with Government money in sight. Even some of the rails rebounded. Santa Fe, for example, rose more than 2 points.

Chrysler carried forward over 3 points and General Motors moved up better than a point. Gains of 1 to 2 points were numerous among the equipment and accessory stocks. Preferred issues, especially in the railroad and utility divisions, found little opposition and many of them rose 2 to 4 points. Steel was above and below the line, above most of the time, but it could not do better than a fraction over the previous closing price.

Discussion of the Jackson Day address of President Roosevelt helped to fill in odd moments in one of the busiest days Wall street has had in recent weeks. It is doubtful whether anyone bought or sold stocks on the basis of the President's remarks. The stock market now is in an upward swing, carried along by its own momentum, and the rise probably will continue until most of the shorts have covered and until those who have been putting their money into stocks in the hope of a business rebound will decide that the upward thrust of prices has carried their favorites out of the bargain class. Meanwhile business news was moderately good on short term outlook.

Replacement.

It is conceded that, whatever may follow, enough replacement demanded for goods at wholesale is likely to give a further fillip to industry and trade. What comes after that will depend upon what Congress does in the next several weeks and how far the Administration is willing to go toward doing what it knows is necessary in order to restore confidence. The impact of the President's latest words found those optimistically inclined mildly encouraged to think that, after the bow has been made to politics, more listening will be given to the inner voice of business. At any rate the speech suggested that the White House considered the public reaction to the outbursts of Ickes and Jackson as lukewarm to frigid.

To that portion of Wall Street which is inclined to take the gloomy view, the address intensified somewhat the pessimism. It contained the same old diatribes against the wicked corporations, along with the same generalities, designed, it was supposed, to give the public to understand that any corporation picked at random was one of the wicked "handful." All that is not going to help confidence. Innocent as it may feel a corporation's board that thinks it may be singled out for prosecution is not going to expand much.

On the statistical side business looks a little better than it did a week ago. The steel industry this week will step up to 27.8 per cent of capacity operations, as against 25.6 per cent the week before and a low of around 19 per cent at the year end. What is going on in steel likely is being duplicated in many other major industries, and consumer industries appear to be improving. At least their stocks—as witness the mail orders—are being confidently bought. On the other hand the next six months give not the slightest indication of reaching the high levels of last year.

On that point the prediction of Lammot duPont that his company anticipated a 23 per cent drop in sales in the first half of this year is worth pondering. Should any such decline prove to be general there will by summer be no longer any quibbling over whether we are in a depression or a recession. On the financial side, with a clear road to further and larger deficits and with almost no probability that the budget will be balanced during the present regime the prospect for inflation is growing brighter, to the temporary satisfaction, no doubt, of speculators and debtors.

Confusion.

An investment counsel's opinion: "We have just witnessed the spectacle of 125,000,000 people being tossed in the air like straws, to see which way the wind is blowing. Granted that might be one way of gauging public opinion, the outstanding result has been the creation of utter confusion in the minds of the productive forces of the country. On thing without which we can surely get along is confusion. Marketwise, the recent antics of the Administration appear to be impotent. Just as the frantic gestures of October and November failed to hold the market up, so the bellowing of Jackson and Ickes, faintly echoed by Roosevelt, failed to keep it down. True, there was a severe shock caused by the harshness of the latest attack on business, but the market usually recovers quickly from the effect of mere words."

Copper's 3rd Rise Makes Price 10⅝

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The price of domestic copper was given a further boost of one-eighth cent today with the posting of a quotation of 10⅝ cents a pound by leading custom smelter sellers. This marked the third rise since last Wednesday and lifted the custom smelter price five-eighth cent a pound above the 1937 low recorded early in December.

Primary producers continued to quote 11 cents, a price they have maintained the last few months in face of fluctuations in the custom smelter market. The high price for domestic copper last year was 17 cents, registered in March.

Following the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Riggs National Bank, held yesterday, Robert V. Fleming, president of the bank, stated that the board of directors had declared the regular dividend on the common stock of $2 per share, as well as an extra dividend of $2 per share, both payable January 15 to shareholders of record January 10 and the regular common dividend of $2 per share, payable April 15 to shareholders of record March 31.

Mr. Fleming further stated that the regular semiannual dividend had been declared upon the preferred stock of the bank, payable February 1 to shareholders of record January 10.

Mr. Fleming announced also that the board had authorized the transfer from profit and loss to surplus account of $50,000, and the setting up of additional reserves in the bank's reserve for retirement of preferred stock fund, wherewith to retire, by lot, in accordance with the board's action of this date, $100,000 in preferred stock on March 1, and in connection with the 1,000 shares of preferred stock, so called, the books of the bank would close on January 22.

Steel Activity Rises to 27.8%

New York, Jan 10 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week advanced 2.2 points to 27.8 per cent of capacity, compared with 25.6 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations averaged 27.4 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 78.8 per cent.

The rise in operations was the second in as many weeks, output in the preceding period having advanced 6.4 points above the 1937 low of 19.2 per cent. The rise in the first week of the new year followed persistent declines in activity over a period of 15 weeks from the 1937 high of 92.3 per cent of capacity on April 26.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 10 (AP).—(United States Department Agriculture.—The Boston wool market was very quiet today. Nominal quotations on domestic wools were unchanged from the close of last week, but there was not enough business to test the market. Wool prices in Australia were softer than at the close of last week's sales, according to cables received by private concerns in Boston. Prices in New Zealand, at a sale on Monday (today) were reported lower than at the closing sale in December.

Mexico Leads World in Peak Silver Output

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 10.—World silver production in 1937 established a new record of 276,000,000 ounces, against the former peak of 261,000,000 set in 1929, Handy & Harman, bullion dealers, estimated in their annual review of the market for this metal today.

Mexico was premier producer, with a total of 88,000,000 ounces; the United States second, with 68,000,000; South America third, 32,300, and Canada fourth, with 24,300,000, while the rest of the world combined produced 63,000,000.

Reviewing price history for the year, the survey noted that fluctuations in New York were the narrowest on record, the spread between the high and low official quotations having been only 2 cents an ounce, compared with 5 cents in 1936. In London the range was reduced to 3 5-16 pence from 3 15-16 pence.

U. S. Policy.

"The steadiness of the market," the review said, "can be definitely ascribed to the silver policy pursued by the United States Government. In support of this statement we call attention to the weakness which developed in foreign markets in December when uncertainty arose as to the continuance of the same policy after the end of the year.

"Exclusive of Treasury purchases, the demand during 1937 was far short of the supply, but the depressing effect on prices which such excess offerings would normally have exerted was rendered inoperative below the level at which the Treasury Department stood ready to acquire silver.

"On the other hand, upward movements of the market above the Government rate were short-lived because of lack of official support at the higher figure."

The review estimated a total of 31,500,000 ounces of silver were used during 1937 by the arts and crafts in the United States and Canada, an increase of nearly 20 per cent over 1936 despite the decline in business in the final quarter.

U. S. Incomes Drop Below Previous Year

November Declies 10.2% Compared With Same Month in 1936.

New York, Jan. 10.—The national income produced in the United States declined sharply from October to November by more than the usual seasonal amount and, for the first time in 1937, dropped below the level of the previous year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The national income in November amounted to $5,397,000,000, or more than a billion dollars less than the October income of $6,426,000,000, which was the highest figure reached in the recovery movement. The national income in November was 10.2 per cent smaller than in the corresponding month of 1936 when it amounted to $6,010,000,000.

It is apparent that the national income showed a further decline in December. Information available at present indicates a drop to $4,901,000,000 which would be 17.3 per cent less than in December of the previous year. If the estimated figure for last month proved to be correct, it will mean that the annual national income in 1937 amounted to $70,847,000,000, slightly higher figure than that in prospect a month ago.

The national income in 1937 was thus larger than in any previous year since 1929, despite the sharp recession at the end of the year. It compares with $63,799,000,000 in 1936, with $39,545,000,000 at the low for the depression in 1932 and with the record high of $80,757,000,000 in 1929.

At the present time, there is little indication that the downward trend will be reversed in January. In fact, the entire first quarter may be featured by an extension of the decline although the outlook for March is somewhat uncertain. Any rise in March, however, is likely to be moderate. At any rate, the total income for the first quarter will probably be between 15 and 20 per cent lower than a year ago.

United Air Passengers 200,444 in Year

Chicago, Jan. 10.—United Air Lines flew a total of 97,578,794 revenue passenger miles and 16,260,000 miles in 1937, the equivalent of 6,500 coast-to-coast trips, it was announced today by W. A. Patterson, president.

The total number of revenue passengers transported by United during the year was 200,000. The company planes flew 4,623,985,643 mail pound miles and 1,587,907,000 express pound miles and its cargo loads represented 38 per cent of the Nation's aid mail and express.

United closed the year with a total of 2,008 employes. Its fleet consists of 52 twin-engined transport planes, including Skylounge and sleeper type Mainliners.

Celotex Transaction Questioned by SEC

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday questioned Wallace Grove, president of Phoenix Securities Corporation, in connection with a proposal to transfer stock of one company controlled by the Phoenix concren to another controlled company with a net profit of $518,000 to Grove's parent corporation. The subsidiaries involved were the Celotex and the Certain-teed companies.

Grove testified that the transaction was "up to the independent stockholders in the Phoenix and Celotex companies." Voicing approval of passing Certain-teed over to Celotex control, he said the two companies paralleled one another rather than being in competition in the market and asserted he knew of "nothing that could be better" for Certain-teed stockholders.

Argentina Reports Another Surplus

Buenos Aires, Jan. 10.—Argentine will have a budget surplus for the year 1937, according to an announcement by the minister of finance, Dr. Carlos Alberto Acevedo, marking the third successive year in which government revenues have equaled or exceeded expenditures.

The minister declared that revenue returns will create a new high record and that there will be an equilibrium in the balance of payments, due mostly to the country's heavy export balance, which is expected to total approximately 800,000,000 pesos ($266,666,666).

Steel Corp. Shipments Drop in December

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Shipments of finished steel products in December by United States Steel Corporation subsidiaries totaled 489,070 tons, a decline of 98,171 tons from November, the corporation announced today.

For the year 1937 shipments, exclusive of year-end adjustments, totaled 12,825,467 tons, compared with 10,825,132 in 1936, an increase of 2,000,335 tons, or 18 per cent.

New York State Sells $100,000,000 in Notes

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Comptroller Morris S. Tremaine today sold to a group of banks and bond firms $100,000,000 New York State 4-month notes at an annual interest rate of one-fourth on 1 per cent.

The notes will be dated January 12 and mature May 12.

†Officially listed on application by the corporation.

Other securities are admitted to dealing as "unlisted" on application of a regular member and approval by the listing committee and the board of governors.

Rates of dividends in the foregoing table are annual disbursements based on the last quarterly or semiannual declaration. Unless otherwise noted, special or extra dividends are not included.

XD—Ex dividend. XR—Ex rights. (a) Also extra or extras. (e) Declared or paid so far this year. (f) Payable in stock. (h) Paid last year. (h) Cash or stock. (k) Accumulated dividend paid or declared this year. (r) Under rule. (ww) With warrants. (xw) Without warrants. (war) Warrants.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 10.—Metal shares were active and firm, responding to higher base metal prices, and rubber issues also moved upward in today's stock market. Rayon and steel securities sold slightly down and Woolworth, Ltd., reacted following the dividend announcement. Paffirs continued in demand in the American section, British funds and rubber issues held about steady.

Paris—The bourse closed with a mixed tone, railroad shares selling higher and electrical equipment issues declining. Suez Canal gained more than 300 francs and Royal Dutch was up 45.

Liverpool—Wheat futures finished with net gains of ¼d to ½d. Weekly world shipments were smaller and there was a sharp decrease in stock at Liverpool. Higher prices in the Bombay cotton market influenced futures here and the market closed 2 to 3 points up. Contracts remained scarce and traders were inclined to be cautious.

Steel Quotations.

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—Steel prices per 100 pounds f. o. b. Pittsburgh: Blue annealed sheets, hot rolled, 2.40; galvanized sheets, 3.80; black sheets, hot rolled, 3.15; steel bars, 2.45.

Bob Burns Says—

I guess there's more complicated detail and less red tape in the moving picture business than in anything else in the world, and I believe the reason it runs so smoothly is because every department is put on its own and is allowed to figure out the best method of doing its job.

My uncle use'ta be a depot agent down home, and one day he got a letter from headquarters givin' him a bawlin' out for actin' on his own judgment without orders from them.

Two days later, he sent 'em a telegram that said "Seven dogs on platform eatin' shipment of two hams—wire instructions."

Couple Facing District Jury In Jewel Case

By the Associated Press.

Waterford, Conn., Jan. 10.—Lieut. John H. Cross, 34, former football star at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, Md., and until last fall assistant football line coach at the Academy, was killed with his wife today in an automobile accident on the Boston Post road near here.

Mrs. Cross, the former Emily Macklin, was burned fatally as flames enveloped their car after a tire blowout sent the machine careening into a fence.

Lieut. Cross, also severely burned in the accident, died several hours later.

Coroner Edward G. McKay quoted a nearby resident as saying he arrived at the scene of the accident as Lieut. Cross staggered from the burning car and rolled in the highway in an effort to put out his flaming clothing. He was taken to a hospital in New London.

Lieut. Cross, who was attached to the submarine base in New London, was an outstanding athlete at the Naval Academy a decade ago. Although he had never played football before going to Annapolis, he was varsity guard on the Navy team of 1926. He also was a stellar lacrosse player.

Graduated in June, 1927, Cross was appointed assistant football coach in the fall of that year, acting as assistant to Edgar E. (Rip) Miller in directing line play of the acdaemy team. He was reappointed to the coaching staff in 1929, and again in 1934, finishing his service at the academy in June, 1937, when he was ordered to New London.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Martha Cross, of Canandaigua, N. Y., and two children, John, 6, and Emily, 4.

Mrs. Cross was a member of a widely known Navy family. Her father is Commander C. F. Macklin, retired, of Baltimore, Md., and two brothers are Lieut. Comdrs. W. A. A. Macklin, attached to the U. S. S. Idaho, and C. F. Macklin, jr., of the U. S. S. Milwaukee. Commander Macklin also was a former star Navy athlete.

Offutt Is Reappointed To D. C. Liquor Board

George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was yesterday reappointed for a four-year term by the District Commissioners.

His present term expires February 3. Offutt was appointed to the board immediately following repeal. He was former president of the Washington Board of Trade.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Mrs. Lawrence Townsend presents Gertrud Wettergren, mezzo-soprano (Fritz Kitzinger, accompanist) and Ruda Firkusny, pianist, at her 100th Musical Morning on January 10 in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom. Program: "Gib mir dein Hertz" (Melartin), "Mot Kveld" (Grondahl), "Jungfrun under Lind" and "Til Majdag" (Peterson-Berger), "An die Musik" (Schubert), "Widmung" (Schumann), "Marias Wiegenlied" (Reger), "Caecilie" (Strauss), "Vad soker du pa Stranden" (Lindberg), "Saf, Saf, Susa" and "Svarta Rosor" (Sibelius), "Habanera" (Bizet), Chorale-Prelude, "Nun kommt der Heiden Heiland" (Bach-Busoni), Impromptu in A flat major, Op. 90 (Schubert), Etudes in C major and E flat major, Op. 10; Scherzo in B flat minor (Chopin), Polka in A flat (Smetana), "Silhouetta" (Dvorak), Furiant (Smetana).

Celebrating the arrival at the 100th mile post in the series of musical mornings which she instituted 15 years ago, Mrs. Lawrence Townsend appeared before her patrons yesterday to thank them for their loyal support, and received from them a unanimous show of hands favoring the continuance of her sponsorship of distinguished artists new in the American concert field. Telegrams of felicitation from Arturo Toscanini, Mary Garden and others enhanced the festive character of the occasion.

Gertrud Wettergren, who was introduced to Washington last season by Mrs. Townsend, was cordially welcomed by the audience on her return, for she had left pleasant memories on her previous visit. Arresting by the impassioned urgency which underlies her poised control, Mme. Wettergren is an admirable interpreter of song. Although her voice showed a trace of hoarseness at the outset, her opening group of unhackeneyed songs by Erkki Melartin, A. B. Grondahl and Wilhelm Peterson-Berger afforded deep satisfaction by the quality of sincerity and the sound musicianship in their delivery.

Her firm and warmly tinted mezzo-soprano came fully into its own in the group of familiar lieder by Schubert, Schumann, Reger and Richard Strauss, which were sung with a fervent lyricism. This captivating earnestness continued in her closing group of songs by Lindberg and Sibelius, to which were added by request Carmen's "L'Amour est oiseau rebelle."

The newcomer on the program was Ruda Firkusny, the young Czech pianist who is making his first visit to the United States. That it will not be his last may be confidently foretold, for his talent is most engaging. Equipped with a masterly technique and a poetic temperament, he keeps them both under admirable restraint, with the result that his playing has the eloquence of just emphasis.

By what he withholds, as well as by what he expresses, he gives evidence of a fine musical endowment. His reading of Busoni's transcription of a Bach chorale-prelude was particularly notable for the sense of controlled power. His distinctions between the styles of Schubert and Chopin showed a keen esthetic insight, as well as a digital dexterity subtle in its coloring. In the three pieces by Smetana and Dvorak, he reminded us that the piano music of these composers is worthy of resurrection and at the same time released a racial poesy.

Mr. Firkusny has a delightful cantabile tone and his use of dynamics is so deft that his coloring is always fresh and glowing. His phrasing is invariably clear and his feeling for proportion does not allow any extravagance.

Ex-Navy Coach Killed

LIEUT. JOHN H. CROSS and his wife were killed yesterday at Waterford, Conn., when their auto was wrecked after a tire blew out. His wife was a native of Baltimore. Cross played football at the Naval Academy and also was assistant football coach for several years until last June. He was stationed at the submarine base at New London, Conn.

Baby, Mother Care Sessions To Open Jan. 17

Mrs. Roosevelt to Talk to Gathering at White House.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will address one session of the Conference on Better Care for Mothers and Babies, called by Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Beureau of the Department of Labor, for January 17 and 18, according to the tentative program announced yesterday. Her address will be given in the East Room of the White House.

Other speakers will include Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor; Mayor LaGuardia of New York; Dr. Mordecai Ezekiel, original brain truster, and Dr. Thomas Parran, jr., surgeon general, United States Public Health Service. All sessions, except that to be addressed by Mrs. Roosevelt will be in the auditorium of the National Museum.

The first session of the conference will begin at 10 a. m. January 17, with Miss Lenroot presiding. Miss Perkins will make the address of welcome.

Subjects for discussion tentatively arranged will include "Maternal and Child Health in Relation to the Health of All the People," by Dr. Parran. A two-part discussion of "What Is Good for Mothers and Babies" will be made by Dr. Jennings Litzenberg, professor of obstetrics and gynecology, University of Minnesota Medical School, and Dr. Horton Casparis, professor of pediatrics, Vaderbilt University School of Medicine. The third subject for the morning session will be "What Is the Need Today," by Dr. Martha D. Eliot, assistant chief of the Children's Bureau.

Utility Charged With 'Spite Lines' By REA's Head

By the Associated Press.

John M. Carmody, rural electrification administrator, accused ann operating company of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation yesterday of building "spite lines" against farmers' co-operative systems in Michigan.

Carmody directed his complaint to Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth. The Michigan operating company, Carmody said, was the Consumers Power Co.

Willkie, replying from New York, said his organization "advises me as to an entirely different state of facts than those presented by your subordinates as reflected in your wire to me. . . . Let's not either one arrive at any final conclusion as to the facts until there has been a complete investigation on both sides."

Private Clearance Of Slums Urged

The District Alley Dwelling Authority yesterday appealed to private enterprise to transform Washington's slums into model low-rent housing units.

Filing its annual report with Congress, the ADA said:

"In this invitation the authority is perfectly sincere. It wishes to see Washington cleared of its slums and equipped with an adequate supply of good, low-rental housing. The sooner this is done, the sooner it can write 'finnis' to its assigned task."

While reiterating its plea for additional funds, the ADA stated it had reclaimed 11 squares containing 13 inhabited alleys and had thus created property values at least equal to its expenditures.

U. S. Witnesses Trace 'Robinson' Passports

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—The Federal Government began presenting to a grand jury today its evidence of raud in the issuance of passports to "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson," missing in Moscow.

Witnesses began tracing the course which passport applications followed through the hands of several alphabethical anonyms—Messrs. A, B, C and D—to the office of former County Clerk Albert Marinelli. The first witness called was Aaron Sharfin, discharged clerk of the Royal Egyption Consulate.

Mrs. Heath Seeks Divorce.

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 10 (AP).—A divorce complaint was filed here today by Ada Lee Heath, Baltimore society woman, against Spencer Heath, wealthy airplane manufacturer. She charges desertion.

All Dictators To Fall, Bishop Tells Laymen

Du Moulin Calls for Spiritual Progress in Speech Here to League.

Despotism and dictatorship "always crash down to inevitable defeat," the ight Rev. Frank Du Moulin, former bishop coadjutor of Ohio, told the Laymen's League of the Church of the Epiphany last night in an address on "Religion and World Affairs."

Asserting that "we are living in the greatest transitional era through which the human family has ever passed," Bishop Du Moulin said the present age was "full of opportunity and promise."

"No dictator, no despot, can rule men of the earth for very long," he declared. "The world is passing through a period of reaction at the present moment, but all progress has its setbacks."

Solution for the "temporary eclipse" of visions of a new era lies in "progress of spiritual values to correspond to the scientific advancement we have already made," Bishop Du Moulin stated. "Scientific knowledge has far outstropped the development of ethics, the humanities, morality and religion."

Declaring that religion must come first, Bishop Du Moulin warned that "tinkering with economics won't do the trick—that's merely dealing with the result instead of the cause."

In his opening remarks, Bishop Du Moulin lauded the Rev. Ze-Barney T. Phillips, rector of Epiphany Church, for his "masterful, dominating, progressive leadership." To the vociferous applause of his audience, he said, "I hope the day will come when I can vote for him as presiding bishop."

4 Youths Confess Kidnap-Robbery Of Treasury Aide

Four colored youths, 15 to 19 years old, last night confessed to participating in the robbery last Saturday night of Abraham E. Tompkin's, 1787 Lanier place northwest.

Three of the youths signed written confessions while the youngest made his admission orally, police said. They were captured by a trooper near Avondale, Pa., yesterday and brought immediately to Washington.

Tompkins, a Treasury Department employe, was forced to drive three colored youths to Lanham, Md., Saturday night after they accosted him at Delaware avenue and C street southwest.

They forced him from his car at pistol point, tied him to a tree, robbed him and then fled in his automobile. Tompkins broke loose and walked to Bladensburg.

Fairfax Holding Woman in Theft

Later that night, police were called to the tourist camp, where they found Becker in a dazed condition, the automobile and $1,500, which he had in his sock, missing.

State Policeman E. C. Trice broadcast a description of the woman and the car to the Richmond police. Mrs. Salanka was picked up by police there Sunday. With her, at the time was her brother. She has been charged with larceny of the automobile and the money.

Symphony Leaves On Second Tour

Embarking on their second tour of the 1937-38 season, Dr. Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra will leave Washington this morning for a trip that will keep them out of the city until Saturday.

Traveling in special cars, the orchestra will go to Richmond, where a children's concert will be presented this afternoon. This evening a regular symphony program will be played.

Tomorrow the orchestra will appear at Pennsylvania State College, State College, Pa., and from there to Olean, N. Y., for a concert Thursday.

The final concert of the tour will be presented at Penn Hall Junior College at Chambersburg, Pa. Principal symphonies to be played on this week's tour include the fourth of Tschaikovsky and Beethoven's seventh.

Burglars Chop Wall, Steal $30,000 in Gems

New York, Jan. 10 (AP).—A 30,000 jewel robbery was discovered today when Hector Belleso opened his Sixth avenue shop for business. The burglars entered the shop throgh a hole they made in the wall separating the jeweler's from a luggage shop, forced a safe, retreated to the luggage shop and took $75 from the cash register.

On Capitol Hill

Copeland Repeats 'Take It Easy' Warning to Senators as Official Reporter Dies.

REPEATING HIS "take it easy" warning of last August to the Senate, Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, yesterday again cautioned Senators to guard their health closely.

Copeland announced the death yesterday of James R. Wick, veteran official debate reporter of the Senate, and seized the occasion to remind shocked members that "since I have been in the Senate, no less than 38 members have died. That is a horrible record.

"I have sounded repeated warnings about the abnormal life we lead here and I can only add to that conditions under which Mr. Wick, our good and close friend, worked, were very similar to those we all endure."

Copeland warned the Senate last August at the time of the death of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the late majority leader. His statement came as a reminder to a Senate wrought up over the anti-lynching bill, with night sessions possibly in the offing.

SPONSORS OF OLD-AGE pension legislation began considering a program which they hope will lead to approval of a pending bill to provide pensions of not more than $200 a month through a 2 per cent transactions tax. A Congressional steering committee for the legislation, known as the general welfare act, started hearings.

Representative Sheppard (Democrat), of California, who presided, said the conference should seek to compose differences among pending old-age pension schemes. Dr. Francis E. Townsend, pension leader, sent a letter to the meeting declining an invitation to attend and asserting participants were "attempting to break faith" with him and his organization.

SENATOR POPE (Democrat), of Idaho, said he has offered a "compromise dairy amendment" to the conference group attempting to compose farm bill differences of House and Senate, and conferees later indicated they believed agreement will be reached on the controversial provision.

"The compromise proposal would prevent any increase in livestock and dairy productoin resulting from diverted acreage," Pope said. "It would not affect normal operations of farmers at present."

CHAIRMAN ASHURST of the Judiciary Committee assured the Senate any Supreme Court nomination would be considered in open hearings.

"That rule is to be adhered to in the future as in the past," he said. "It is a good rule and is particularly applicable to nominations by the President for the Supreme Court."

Ashurst said he also approved of a change in Senate rules sought by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, to require open hearings on all Supreme Court nominations.

SENATOR REYNOLDS (Democrat), North Carolina), veteran of three days' discussion of foreign affairs during consideration of the antilynching bill, told the Senate yesterday the United States would become involved in "serious trouble" if armed forces were not withdrawn from China.

Recalling that just a day before the Panay was sunk, he had warned the Senate of the possibility of such an incident, he said the American people wanted to stay out of war, but that if "half a dozen ships" were blown up "the people would be so outraged we'd go to war tomorrow."

'No' Cries Kill Move to Boost Funds for CCC

Economy Revolt Suffers Its First Setback in House Action.

By the United Press.

The revolt against President Roosevelt's economy drive suffered its first setback yesterday when the House rejected a proposal by Representative Jed Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, to increase Civilian Conservation Corps appropriations $45,000,000 beyond budget estimates.

There was no record vote, only a loud yell of "No!" when Johnson sought to attach his amendment to the independent offices appropriation bill. The President proposed the CCC appropriation be reduced to $226,331,000 for the 1939 fiscal year, $124,000,000 below 1938.

Representative Clifton Woodrum (Democrat), Virginia, opposed the amendment and warned Government spending must be curtailed.

"Unless some Congress, some time, gets the idea that you can't go on spending more than you receive, pretty soon there won't be any business and industry," he said.

Woodrum also urged that the House give the President the authority he seeks to eliminate individual items of an appropriation bill without being compelled to veto the entire measure. He said such action would be a "great step" toward balancing the budget.

5 Hurt in Crash Near Alexandria

Three persons, who received severe injuries in a head-on collision near Hunting Creek Bridge on the Washington - Richmond highway Sunday night, were in serious condition last night in the Alexandria Hospital.

Angelo Serio, 28, 609 Orleans place northeast, driver of the other car, suffered a broken leg and other minor injuries. The crash knocked the body of the Serio car completely off the chassis.
